Rambling Around

By The Oldtimer — D. A. Waters

For some thirty or forty years the established physicians in Dallas were Dr. Calvin A. Spencer and Dr. James G. Laing. Other doctors were here a part of the time also.

Both Drs. Spencer and Laing were Republicans and took part in party conventions, etc. Both were active in civic affairs and each held some public offices. Both invested money and helped organize various local enterprises. In 1868, both became stockholders and charter members of the High School Association of Dallas, which built and organized the first high school west of Wyoming Avenue, Kingston. Both followed through in the community split which resulted, and signed the application for the Borough charter in 1879. In 1889, they became stockholders in the Dallas Broom Company, formed by local men to provide an industry to be located in the abandoned Methodist Church building, now Rosary Hall. Doctor Spencer was also an incorporator of the first telephone company in 1878, the Woodlawn Cemetery Association in 1883, and the Dallas Union Agricultural Association in 1885, which started and conducted the Dallas Fair. Both doctors left sons who were physicians.

Not much other information is available regarding Dr. Calvin A. Spencer. Whether he came from one of the local Spencer families is not clear. He owned a farm at Factoryville and may have come from that area. He was president of Luzerne County Medical Society in 1882. He built and resided in the big house on the south side of Main Street, between the residences of Chester White and Ira D. Shaver, later occupied by Miss Anna Wright, the C. A. Frantz family, and now by Mrs. Louise Colwell.

Since our family was served at the time by Dr. Laing, I have no personal recollection of Dr. Spencer, but various others recall him. He had a son or brother, Frank, who had a deformity in one leg, whom most people now living remember better than the doctor with whom he lived. Dr. Spencer had several wives, some say four, two of whom are said to have been sisters. The marker in Woodlawn Cemetery shows Sarah E., wife of Dr. Calvin E. Spencer (1844-1877) and infant daughter. A separate marker shows Sarah J. Campbell (1818-1903), presumably the doctor's mother-in-law. A later wife, Ida Campbell, died around the turn of the century and shortly thereafter he married Miss Mary E. Hawley of Dorranceton. There are some residing here who recall Mary Hawley as an exceedingly pretty school teacher in Dallas and who were her pupils. Several

Dr. and Mrs. Edward Carey, Jr., and family have moved from Philadelphia to Falls Church, Virginia, where Dr. Carey will open offices for the practice of internal medicine.

Dr. Carey is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carey, Sr., Sunset Avenue, Shavertown. A graduate of Westmoreland High School he received his degree in premed from King's College, Wilkes-Barre. He taught on a Fellowship at Notre Dame for a year following graduation. He graduated from Jefferson Medical College and took his internship and residency at Misericordia Hospital, Philadelphia.

Dr. Carey is married to the former Janis Schwall, Shavertown. The couple have two children, Scott, aged two and a half, and Eileen, nine months old. Dr. Carey and his family were recent guests of his parents, when they attended the nuptials of his brother, Robert Carey on June 15.

While still in New York State, he was married to Charlotte Lee Morris
