Mrs. H. H. Zeiser Is 91 Today

MRS. H. H. ZEISER

It is fitting that opening day of the 17th Library Auction is also the 91st birthday of the lady who has ultimate charge of the Risley home—Granny.

Mrs. H. H. Zeiser, as she signs her name, is Myra Risley's mother, wife of the late Harry H. Zeiser, superintendent of schools of Wilkes-Barre. Although she doesn't get around as much as she used to, disconcerting her yearly trips to Florida, Granny has reached legendary status in this community.

She divides her time about half and half between good old-fashioned work and the verbal narrative, and constantly amazes people. It is obvious that motion is her secret to long life.

Born in Wilkes-Barre to John E. Smith and Mrs. Smith, who died of tuberculosis at childbirth, Margaret was one of three children. She attended public schools and Wyoming Seminary. John Smith remarried, and the family moved to a farm above Nescopeck, where neighbors were the Zeisers.

Margaret Smith and Harry Zeiser were childhood sweethearts, and as it happens in stories, Mr. Zeiser returned home—a graduate of Bloomsburg and Lafayette College, and they married.

When Mr. Zeiser died in 1934, his wife moved to Dallas to live with Myra and Howard. Another daughter, Mrs. Leighton R. Scott, lives in Easton, and a son Bruce lives in Providence.

Granny is pictured above, unbeknownst to her, picking lilies.

Her day begins just as yesterday's ended, worrying about today's meals, the welfare of her cats, dogs, and parakeet ("Good morning, mama." "Good morning, Pretty Boy"), or transporting screendowns and sports coats to a better place.
