Penna State Center Will Open Sept. 23

The fall term of Pennsylvania State University's Wilkes Barre Center, 669 N. Washington Street, will begin Monday, September 23.

George W. Bierly, director, announced that registration and orientation will be held during the week.

One hundred freshman are expected to register for the new term. All students have enrolled for two full academic years of work, leading to associate degrees in engineering with majors in surveying technology, drafting and design, technology or electrical or electronics technology.

During orientation, students will meet their faculty advisors, take guidance tests and receive helpful information on registration procedure.

Professor Angelo Contanzo, student affairs chairman, will speak on "Going To College". Penn State system of grading will be explained by Prof. Lee Sweinberg, engineering faculty member and slide rule practitioner conducted by Prof. Robert Bella of the engineering department.

A highlight of the week will be an all student outing where freshman will get acquainted with upper classes.

Day classes will begin on September 30.

Deer Killed When Struck By Car

A young fawn was found killed along Route 309, near the Dallas Outdoor Theater, early Friday morning.

Don Weidner, Dallas Post employee, spotted the animal on his way to work and called the Game Commission. The carcass was removed shortly by a game warden.

Nursing-Type Homes Planned For Vets

The President has authorized the Veterans Administration to activate and operate facilities and beds to care for 2000 nursing home type veteran-patients, in addition to the 125,000 hospital beds now authorized within the VA medical system. The President said: "The changing characteristics of our veteran population, particularly those who served during the First World War, are resulting in nearly 1,000,000 war veterans aged 70 and over. The number will increase 50 percent by 1966.

"Older veterans account for one-third of hospital admissions and comprise the bulk of the long-term care patient load. Retention of these patients in facilities designed for acute care is costly and places an undue strain on the 125,000 hospitals bed limit under which you are now operating."
