WEST WYOMING GAME — Dallas traveled to Exeter stadium Saturday to continue their unbeaten streak, gaining a victory over the West Wyoming squad. Dallas was in control of the ball from the start with Mike Jones and John Brominski leading the mounts.

Play started with West Wyoming deep in their own territory. They were forced to punt which was blocked successfully by Mike Jones producing a safety. Dallas returned the following kick-off for a score with John Farley going in for the tally. Joe Noon smashed over for the extra point. This concluded the first half scoring.

Dallas came back in the second half with another counter with Farley again hitting paydirt. The extra point attempt was blocked. The Dallas Eleven's next contest was with a tough Exeter team at Exeter on Friday night, October 18th.

League Women Voters Explains Convention

Mrs. Charles Popky, speaking for the League of Women Voters re-assures voters about the proposed constitutional convention: Expressions of fear about what a constitutional convention might do, cannot be realistic. Voting for delegates to a constitutional convention is no different from voting for delegates to either our state or national congress.

Actually, we are delegating less of our rights to those elected to the constitutional convention than we do to our state or national representatives, because after the convention, the people of Pennsylvania choose whether to accept or reject the proposed Constitution by voting for or against it in an election. Likewise, we are assured of a by-partisan convention because although each political party nominates two delegates, the three candidates with the largest vote are elected.

Experience in other states has shown that men of the highest calibre are anxious to serve as delegates to a constitutional convention because of the prestige involved.

The inadequacies of the 1874 Constitution have been known for half a century. The many attempts to up-date it through amendments have failed.

The present constitution is Pennsylvania's fourth since 1776. Each of these constitutions was written by conventions. Constitutional Conventions are the democratic way of revising a constitution.
