

Local Sharpshooters At Harvey's Lake Turkey Shoot

You're not allowed to shoot turkeys on Sunday, but you can shoot FOR turkeys which have already gone to the Happy Hunting Ground. So every now and again, the Harvey's Lake Rod and Gun Club holds a turkey shoot, open to the public. Dallas Post divided its time between shooting a gun and shooting a camera, and came up with these pictures of a recent shoot. It's all very simple: Man with the highest number of points wins a turkey. One shoots at a graded target, which may be shaped like a turkey or a deer, with rifle or handgun. At a dollar for two or three shots (own ammo), he'd better have a good eye. At upper left, a group of marksmen check out and compare targets. Carlton Kooser tries for a bird with his weighted target .22 automatic, upper center. Next over, this young fella means business. Charles Galloway, 14, Centermoreland-Vernon road, turns in high scores competing against the old-timers in the scope division. Paul Taylor and some young friends sight in on the "running deer" on the hill 120 yards away with a spotting scope, lower left. Next over, Jack Cave wishes Ralph Dula luck in the iron sight competition. The rack full of rifles contains all manner of personal favorites, as each individual prefers something different, and the guys will bring anything from a brush carbine to a .30-06 Springfield sporterized army rifle. Watch out you don't swallow your cigar, Al.

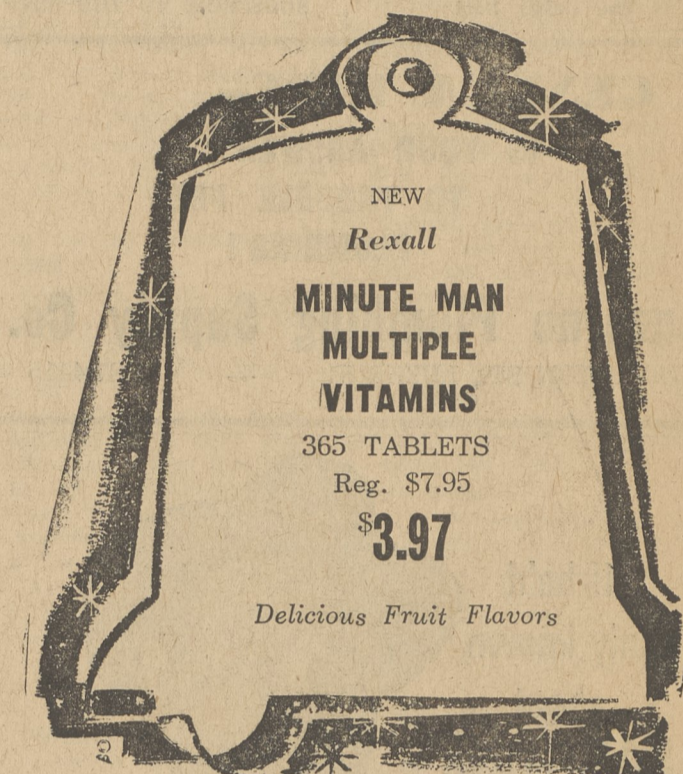

New Game Road

A new road has been opened into State Game Lands 57 above Noxen for antlered deer in 'hard-to-reach' areas, according to the Pennsylvania Game Commission. It has also been open for bear season. The stretch is two miles of Cider Run Road from the Bownans Creek gate to the top of Mt. Gate. Commission Supervisor Roy Trexler advises all persons to use special care in traveling rough roads in the area.
