

Mt. Zion

We are sorry to hear that Clayton Gray has had to go to the hospital again, with his back. That trouble of his goes way back to when I was chaplain in Pittston Hospital. He really suffered then and since. Part of the time he lay in a body cast like a barrel!

Cleve LaBar continues in an uneven sort of condition, still in the hospital, sometimes better than others. Sometimes quite weak.

Mrs. William LaBar is in the hospital for a second operation within a few weeks. Her condition is not as good as wished for, but perhaps as good as could be expected under the circumstances. Her cousin, Evelyn, who visited her last week spoke of how brave she is. It was last Sunday, according to Myrtle Smith's letter, that Evelyn, Si, and Marcia were up to visit Cleve LaBar, and Evelyn spent part of the time with Marion. Myrtle writes that spring has struck their section and she and Paul want to get to digging in the garden and setting out more trees and shrubbery.

Ira Crawford of Sutton Creek Road continues in a critical condition at Valley Crest. He's pretty well along in years.

Catherine got a glad handed reception from her friends in the oratorio chorus Saturday when she showed up for final dress rehearsal. And Sunday we attended the concert and enjoyed it together. I know

Ruth and I would have felt badly about with Cathy if she couldn't have gone. I had her ride in the back seat with her bad leg up on the seat. Her leg hasn't all healed up yet, but it is doing well. The doctor told her it would be a long time.

We did enjoy the concert. It was somewhat out of the ordinary and beautifully done. The second part of the concert was particularly poignant inasmuch as it was the Requiem Mass in D Minor by Gabriel Faure and was dedicated to the memory of John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Although it was sung in Latin the words were printed on the program in English. I found myself thinking of John Kennedy and praying for his soul in the words: "May the angels bring you into Paradise. May the chorus of angels receive you, and you have eternal rest."

Funny, isn't it, how one who is not theologically oriented to the idea of prayers for the dead can, in fact, find himself praying for the dead. It has made me feel quite unworthy when a friend has asked me to pray for the soul of a departed one. I always honor such a request. At the same time I have grown up with the feeling that it is not necessary, when the departed soul is in the immediate presence of the Everlasting Father. What can my prayers add? And yet - - love reaches out beyond and beyond!

Vacation Months Can Be Made Profitable For Many Students

Many high school students eagerly await the arrival of the summer vacation but waste a period of 10 to 12 weeks. This vacation time can be the most profitable time of the year for many students. Although jobs may be scarce, the summer months can prove to be profitable to many students if they will experiment with ideas and notions about vocations and further education. This is a time for many students to apply for work at camps, in industry, on farms, service type positions, and visiting schools and industries to learn what these areas of work and education will be like in the future. These minor jobs and visitations will assist many students in selections of future careers.

Seeing the campus and meeting people associated with the school is one of the best ways to make a decision on where a student wishes to pursue further study. This experience, plus the vacation itself, will add a great deal to the total enrichment value of such a trip. Waiting until the senior year to make college plans is not sufficient. Students in the ninth, tenth, and eleventh grades should visit colleges as much as possible. During the interviews at these colleges the students and parents can realize what the chances of being accepted will be at the various schools. Knowing this can be of great assistance in planning where to make application later in the Junior year or early Senior year of school.

Another area of doing something in the summer is travel. Many families will plan vacations and not think about having the route of travel mapped through towns where colleges are located which interest the student. A two-fold purpose can evolve from a vacation wisely planned. Interviews can be arranged for the student at the college campus and in this way the student can make a much wiser decision about eventually applying at that school.
