Bargains Still Exist Despite Market Highs

Many so-called secondary stocks with good growth prospects are selling at relatively low multiples of 10 to 13 times earnings and are trading near their 1962 lows, Spear & Staff, Inc., investment advisors, point out.

"We can't remember a time in the past ten years where such a wide discrepancy existed for so long between leading Dow issues and the vast bulk of secondaries," said Roger E. Spear, president.

Spear feels that the anomaly will eventually be corrected, with secondaries possibly moving higher in the not-too-distant future.

Noting that the Coldwater nomination hardly caused a ripple in the market, Spear said: "This event was already pretty much discounted. Politics may affect the market later, but not for the present."
