Mrs. Stella R. Rousing, Ninety On August 23 To Be Honored

One of Sweet Valley's oldest residents, Mrs. Stella R. Rousing will observe her 90th birthday on August 23.

A special service will be held at Mooretown Assembly of God Sunday evening in her honor.

In good health, "better than ever," says the nonagenarian, Mrs. Rousing, a long time School and Sunday School teacher in the Sweet Valley area, resides on the Fred Upsyke farm, looking forward to her trips to services at her church and the study of the Bible.

Daughter of the late Isaac and Mary Jane Fowler Harned, the Back Mountain area has always been her home. Her husband John Rousing died a number of years ago. She is the only surviving member of her family.

Of a cheery disposition, Mrs. Rousing is interested in the world about her and believes she was allotted her long span of years to carry out the Christian work which now fully occupies her time. As to hobbies she once turned out a number of paintings and enjoyed flower gardening.

The story of her early life and her philosophy is best told in her own words:

"I was born August 23, 1874 in an old log house near Grassy Pond, a short distance from Sweet Valley which was the home of my grandfather, Samuel Harned. Not long after this my father bought a farm containing a log house about a mile from our former home which contained 100 acres of land and woods. Edmund, my brother, was born here.

"When I was nine years of age, my father took a load of props to Shickshinny in order to buy food. As it was rainy and cold that day, my father went in to a place to get warm. Some men grabbed him, held him, forced his head back and poured whiskey down his throat. He went out to unfasten his team and get on his wagon when the men yelled at his horses who rushed forward throwing my father on his head. They picked him up dead and brought him home.

"After that many a day I did not have anything to eat until my mother came home from work. She almost always took my brother with her. I could see it was up to me to make a success out of my life. I was strong and healthy. I earned my own clothes and worked for my board and went to school in the winter.

"A large school house made for those who wanted to become teachers was built above Sweet Valley. (This was the old Sweet Valley Academy.) I took advantage of this as a friend paid my expenses and in a short time I received a certificate to become a teacher. Some time later I passed my examination to become a professor. From that time on I made enough money to care for myself and my home.

"Right now these are the days we do not know what is to come to pass, but I understand that the Lord is going to take care of his people a certain length of time. It appears to me that now the time is here and we must trust and obey and follow the Lord Jesus Christ."

SOUP'S ON

What do you do with your leftover corn?

It makes a perfectly marvelous soup, if you start with bits of bacon, sauteed with minced onion, add the corn, boil the whole business up with water, and add a can of evaporated milk.

Sliced hardboiled eggs and nourishment.

What to do with leftover mashed potatoes is no problem. Like potato soup? Or do you have to get it out of a package in order to be happy?

Same procedure as with the leftover corn. A little butter helps. Just what you need for lunch, with a tomato and lettuce sandwich.

Mother And Daughter Graduates At Reunion

Mrs. Stanley Farr, White Birch Trailer Park and Mrs. Levo Kocker, her daughter, of Spottswood, N. J., were the only mother and daughter graduates of Wyoming Valley Hospital attending the 50th anniversary of the Training School for nurses on Saturday.

Mrs. Florence S. Wagner Opens Art Studio At Home

A proficient, enthusiastic and colorful artist, Mrs. Florence S. Wagner, Druid Hills, Shavertown, paints with the ease of a master.

Each room of her cozy home is highlighted by the canvases upon its walls.

Mrs. Wagner recently opened an art studio in her home and welcomes all comers.

With an artistic bent early discernible, the Shavertown artist did not get around to serious painting until five years ago, enjoying periods with the brush and palette during the fifteen years preceding.

Wintering in Florida at a N. Miami Trailer Park, she has studied under Cherri Litts, well known artist of New York and Florida. In the Southland Mrs. Wagner has had several showing and finds a ready market for her paintings.

A stout weatherbeaten old seaman, a vivacious clown with twinkling eye, realistic glimpses of the passing scene and fascinating still life arrangements are among the many outstanding oils now on display at her home, 281 Ferguson Avenue, where she resides during the nicer months of the year with her husband, Lou Wagner.

Mrs. Wagner, the former Florence Sugden, Wilkes-Barre, has also done some knife paintings, French style, which are most appealing and her choice of colors are superb whether it be portrait, landscape, or floral arrangements. She frames her own paintings offering a wide choice to suit any decor.

As another hobby, Mrs. Wagner is interested in flowers and shrubs and her garden is always a delightful spot to visit in.
