Known World-Wide, Not Dedicated, Geisinger Plans Its Golden Jubilee

Geisinger Medical Center, where hundreds of Back Mountain people have been hospitalized, is planning its Golden Jubilee in 1965.

The "hospital on the hill" overlooking the Susquehanna Valley at Danville will complete its fiftieth year of service on September 12, 1965.

The George F. Geisinger Memorial Hospital was never formally dedicated. It was opened two weeks in advance of schedule in response to a critical community situation. A typhoid epidemic was sweeping Danville. Dr. Abigail A. Geisinger, the donor, decided that the hospital should begin its work of mercy at this time.

Plans for the four-day dedication ceremony had to be scrapped. Instead of what was to be the most elaborate event in Danville's history, a simple private devotional service was held on September 24, 1915. Mrs. Geisinger and a small group of her intimate friends and advisors participated.

The Danville Morning News, describing the hospital's emergency opening, noted that it was most appropriate "to enter upon its exalted mission of saving life and relieving suffering when such service was most needed."

The newspaper account continues: "Early in the afternoon, the new ambulance was observed flying up and down the streets on its melancholy errands. Thus, one after another of the sufferers were gathered in."
