Mount Zion

It used to be the thing to keep diaries from January through December. Somehow I got away from that when I began to use loose-leaf books and could juggle the dates. Until now I have managed to put in enough extra leaves to go to the first of September. But I'm filled right now. This makes this diary parallel my interim pastorate at West Pittston Congregational Church. The extra writing was occasioned by more meditations working up sermons each week, and writeups of events. So I close the current diary on the report of the marvelous party they gave us last Wednesday night, when they welcomed the Rev. James Williams as regular pastor and his family. They took the occasion to do nice things for us, such as having two children who had been most regular front-seaters for my children's stories deliver to me the gifts that had been selected. One of them was a beautiful 23 jewel wrist watch. Specially appropriate for a preacher, for the more he gets wound up while preaching the more the watch winds up with his arm-waving! People said many lovely things to us as they came by one by one to ask me what time it was so they could look at the watch! They asked Russell Lawry to say a few remarks inasmuch as he had known me the longest.

PHONE CALL FROM DOROTHY ANN SEARFOS

It is always a pleasure to visit a bit with this lady who was the little girl I have written about who used to bring me duck eggs when we lived in the Carverton parsonage. I inquired about their little boy Kevin who is about six. She tells me he has been having a hard time getting over a recent bout with pneumonia and they are taking him on a vacation trip to Cape Hatteras where the salt sea breeze may do something good for the respiratory difficulty. I hope so. She also told me to get everybody's mouths watering for a strawberry and ice cream festival the Pairs and Spares of the Carverton Sunday School are planning for July 17. They have made preparations while fresh strawberries were in season by putting many quarts down in the deep freeze where they'll stay fresh for home-made shortcake. The ice cream will be home cranked too, she says. Well that is an announcement everybody will want to watch for.

Busy Days
 Saturday morning, we awoke to a nice dampening rain but the sun came out to make it a pleasant day. There was work on Saturday morning but I arose early to get in some porcupine and petunias since the soil was easy to work with. Although some of the family attended the Horse Show and parade, Fred and I had a busy time with my decision to close up the sump, get grass seed planted and try and restore to some order that awful looking yard which has been ripped up since I came home from the hospital. We suspect some underground drainage but will check source after the wedding is over. With a shower set for Sunday, time is at a premium.

As usual our firemen appeared decked in their best with their equipment spic and span for the Lehman parade. With a little rainfall they might have a pleasant respite from fire fighting.

Once again we are getting geared for the Library Auction. Susie will whip up some good fudge and Fred has been soliciting new goods, to which there was a fine response. This is one of our favorite times of all the year and we hate to miss one minute of it. I would like to watch the children's auction this time for this is one phase I have missed and what is more delightful than to see the kiddies in action. Of course my sympathy always goes out to the ones who have limited means and want a particular item at more than the others.

Night Raid

Highlighting the evening of a recent party in Noxen was the ceremony of the Milking of the Cow, shown here, slightly out of focus (just like the participants), captured by the Dallas Post's ubiquitous camera, which was sneaking around in the night. Identification of the principals is not possible, although the cow is readily apparent.

Unknown to Torchy Wilson, the owner, who had the thing pastured behind his place on Market Street, these renegades crept through back yards, with pall and all, made as if to milk the animal in stealth, and in order to avoid being larcenous, took not a drop, but merely smiled for the camera flash.

Elnae Dixon, whose picture appeared two weeks ago receiving the Lions Club Bud Dixon Award for English, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Dixon, Dallas. The caption under the picture listed her as the daughter of Mrs. Margaret Dixon only, and since Mr. Dixon has been ill, the omission of his name led many to think he had died.
