THE MINISTER

I
 The chimes are mute,
 And past the quiet heads bowed low in prayer,
 A shaft of sunlight mingles with his hair,
 Then burnishes the darkness of his robe
 A frame of gold-flecked velvet for his face.
 With earnest voice he reads beloved words,
 The Scripture weaving well the needed web,
 Suspending souls caught in its priceless lace.

II
 He watches close the mother, hollow-eyed,
 Her age-old question silent in the air,
 And gently lays to rest her son who died.
 With prayer he gropes within the endless well
 Of comfort; finds words to make her live again and love,
 And know her spring of faith has not yet dried.

III
 He stands alone.
 Upon the hill at last, his soul lies bare;
 His wounds are sore, they yet remain unknissed.
 Man was he born, man must he ever be;
 As all men must, he fights his fight alone
 And tries to reach his God through blinding mist.
 The tender hand that cradles all men's hearts
 At last unbound, falls idle to his side.
 His head bows low — he keeps his silent trust.
 by Persis.

Editor's note: This was written by my daughter Persis, at the time a well loved minister left his pastorate. No minister who can inspire such feeling among his parishioners should dream of adopting any other profession, or of entering another branch of ministerial service. He has too much to give to his people. Clergymen of his calibre are sorely needed. HIX.

Mrs. Farley Dies Of Heart Attack

Services At Sunset In Summer Home

Simple Society of Friends services were held last night at sundown for Eleanor Coates Farley, from her summer home in Beaumont. She had died Monday afternoon where she would have wished to die, on the farm which she and her husband Eugene, working with their children, had developed over a period of almost thirty years. It would be impossible to list her accomplishments as musician, painter, author. A brilliant personal career opened before her when she was a young woman, but it seemed more important to her to devote herself to her family, and when the move was made to Kingston from Newark, N. J., to adopt the faculty of the fledgling Bucknell Junior College as her own. During the years when it grew from Bucknell Junior, to Wilkes Junior College, and finally attained stature as a four-year institution of higher learning, hers was the gracious presence which welded the burgeoning faculty into a unit, and kept before the students a standard of conduct which was to shape many thousands into a pattern for future years. Born of Quaker parentage, she recently established a Friends Meeting in the rear of Weckesser Hall. Her parents were Robert Livesey and Ethel Gates Coates, of Philadelphia and Swarthmore. Her mother was a newspaper woman of long standing. In 1921 she married Eugene Shelden Farley, the present head of Wilkes College. She leaves her husband, Dr. Farley; a daughter, Mrs. Walter J. Douglas, Jr., of Swarthmore; two sons: Robert Coates Farley, Greenville, Tenn.; and Dr. Eugene Farley Jr., Trumbursburg, N. Y. There are fourteen grandchildren.

A fitting obituary for Mrs. Farley was uttered by the ambulance crewman who was attempting to administer oxygen: "She was such a lovely lady." It was characteristic of the Farley family that a local undertaker should be called to handle arrangements, a man who had been a friend of the family in the country for many years, at the foot of the steep hill leading to Fair-Lea—Paul Nulton.
