Shavertown Resident Discovers Flaming Fall Foliage Balloon

On October 9, the Flaming Foliage Festival at Renova, Pa., is celebrated with representative students attending from all over Pennsylvania, one from each high school and a queen selected.

At the same time gas filled balloons bearing the name of the girls are released, a grand prize going to the recipient whose balloon has traveled the greatest distance. Tags attached to the balloons notify finders that they may receive a $10 award in event the name inscribed thereon is the winner.

Harvy Smith, 235 Ferguson Avenue, Shavertown, while driving on the Acme Bakery parking lot on Race Street, Wilkes-Barre, Thursday night found a Festival tag bearing the name of Theda Friel, 1100 Central Avenue, Renova.

As he turned the identifying card over he learned that he was eligible for $10 if the balloon remnant he had discovered had gone the greatest distance. He will forward same with a newspaper confirmation to the Bucktail Balloon Derby at Renova. Entries will be accepted until November 30. The one Smith found had traveled a distance of ninety miles from its starting point.

State Game Land No. 57 is the second largest tract of State Game lands in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. This large Game land comprises 33,237 acres and is located in Forkston, Noxen and North Branch Townships in Wyoming County and Lake, Fairmont and Ross Townships in Luzerne County. This adjoins State Game Land No. 13 located in Sullivan County which consists of 38,906 acres. The two have a combined acreage of 72,133 acres.

Original purchase of State Game Land 57 was from Albert Stull in 1930. The largest single purchase, consisting of 12,934 acres was from the Pennsylvania Lumber Co. in 1931. An additional 10,955 acres was purchased from 1932 to 1937 from A. A. and A. L. Stull.

Lumbering was the principal industry. Since Hemlock was the predominant species, the peeling of the hemlock bark was very important because it was used in the tanning industry. A large tannery was located near Noxen and utilized the bark from the area. The site of the town of Ricketts was absorbed by Game Lands 57 and 13. It was a lumbering town and when the timber was gone the timbermen moved on and the village was abandoned. At one time it comprised 150 to 175 dwellings, one church and two schoolhouses.

Harvesting of ice was a seasonal occupation at Beech Lake and Mountain Springs. A railroad spur was built to facilitate the transportation and storing of ice. A deposit of semi-anthracite coal was located on the Dutch Mountain section and mined intermittently until 1947.

Practically all upland game species, both large and small, are to be found within the borders of this Game Land. The deer herd is large and well balanced; many fine bucks are taken each year. Bear also find the habitat in this area to their liking. Large numbers of blueberry bushes, hickory and oak trees, and other natural foods make the area attractive to these shagwag creatures. Wild turkeys are quite common and have increased at a good rate since they were reintroduced some time ago. Our State Game bird the Ruffed Grouse is found in varying numbers throughout the entire area. Snowshoe and cottontail rabbits and gray squirrels are all present. Beaver and muskrat are fairly plentiful in the various streams and lakes in the area. Wild ducks and geese utilize the dams created by the beavers in their operations. All other furbearers and predators are present. Wildcats are also found here in limited numbers. Many of the roads which traverse the area were made by the Civilian Conservation Corps. This work began in 1933 and has been continued to the present time.

These game lands are located relatively close to the metropolitan centers of Wilkes-Barre and Scranton and are heavily utilized during the various hunting seasons during which all species of game are hunted.

On Friday, October 29, archery season closes at 5:30 p. m. EST. Saturday, October 30, small game season (RABBITS, PHEASANT, QUAIL, WILD TURKEY) opens at 8 a.m. EST. And on November 2, DUCK, MERGANSER and COOT seasons close at sunset, 5:04 p. m. EST.

Youthful Halloweeners Prefer Homemade Goblins

If it's your turn to have the neighborhood Halloween party this year, you can make it a memorable one for all the little goblins on the guest list.

Begin by making your own invitations. The small fry in your family can help. Trace pumpkin shapes on the paper backing of orange Marvalon adhesive covering—one for each guest. Peel off the backing and attach the pumpkins to white note paper. Trim note paper to pumpkin shape and write your invitation on the paper.

For the big night itself, make your front door into a giant skull, using white and black adhesive covering, leave openings for eyes, nose and mouth. If your door has windows, your young guests will be able to peer through the skull into the party before they come in.

The view through the window will be fascinatingly frightening if you make the front hall a chamber of horrors. Cut out pumpkins, ghosts, witches and brooms, moons, and skeletons and skulls in various sizes, using orange and black Marvalon. Arrange some of these spooky characters on the walls. (Marvalon will peel off after the party, leaving no marks.)

Put the rest of the figures back-to-back and hang them from the ceiling, low enough for the children to brush against them. Keep the ball lighting dim.

Entertain the hobgoblins with a game of "Stick the Skull on the Skeleton." It's more fun if each one has an adhesive covering skull with his name on it to leave on the skeleton until the last person plays. Award the winner a toy skeleton.

Finish out game time with a treasure hunt around the yard and apple bobbing.

While they're eating, have the guests vote on who has the best, the scariest, and the prettiest costume. Award prizes to winners, but be sure everyone else gets a prize, too.

More Televisions Than Bathtubs Or Showers

More American families have television sets than have bathtubs or showers.

The latest census found 6.9 million housing units without access to a tub or shower, compared to 6.7 million without a TV set.

Despite this apparent preference for soap opera over soap suds, the standard of housing in the United States is improving, according to Aetna Life Insurance Company, which has $1.5 million invested in private housing.
