a Dog's Life

CARE OF YOUR DOG'S NAILS
By Bob Bartos, Manager
Friskies Pet Foods Research Center

The most frequently neglected part of a dog is his nails. This is because many owners assume that regular exercise wears them down. Unfortunately, the majority of dogs don't get the amount of exercise on hard ground that it takes to keep paw-nails pedicured. The result of such nail-neglect can be sore feet and lameness, and the development of a faulty front gait, particularly in the growing youngster.

To shorten your dog's nails you need two pieces of equipment: a special nail clipper for dogs which is available in pet supply stores; and a good file, either a "four-way shoe rasp" or a "double cut bastard" available in hardware stores.

Start by clipping off a little of the nail at a time if this is your first attempt at the job. The beginner must beware of cutting into the quick, the live pink flesh within the nail which is easy to spot on a light-colored dog but difficult when nails are dark. If you should inadvertently hit the quick, the pain is apt to make your dog touchy about the feet, wary and hard to manage during subsequent pedicures, so do be careful.

After you've cut as much away as you feel is safe, use the file to smooth off rough edges. Draw it in one direction, from the top of the nail downward in a round stroke, to the end of the nail or underneath.

If you introduce your dog to regular monthly pedicures when he's still a puppy he'll learn to patiently tolerate the procedure. It will make all subsequent nail clippings during your pet's lifetime much easier on both of you.

Feeding tip: Nothing puts excess fat on your dog faster than too much fat in his diet. The best way to make sure your pet gets just the amount that he needs to maintain good health and weight is to feed him canned Friskies dog food.
