Dallas Borough Sixth-Graders Show Science Projects

Sixth Grade Science Exhibit Draws Much Interest At Dallas Elementary

Samuel Barbosa's Sixth grade room at Dallas Borough School put on a display of scientific projects last week.

Members of the PTA enjoyed the exhibit in the sixth grade room at their May meeting, and each class in school visited the room in the basement, where the exhibits were ranged on tables, with explanatory placards.

Kneeling by the "Riches of the Earth" display is David Neiman, demonstrating a model of a coalmine, electrically operated. Seen on the table also are oil derrick and volcano, together with a cross-section of the earth.

Marian Rosser presides over the solar system, Dale Williams demonstrates an ancient observatory, and Bud Nelson shows off the erupting volcano.

There were 96 exhibits in all, 65 of them from the sixth grades. Students made up a colorful booklet, with sun, moon and stars, space ships and rockets, models of atomic arrangements, and growing green things on the cover.

Projects covered the atom, a chemical clock, a camera, an incubator, various phases of electricity, microscope, the weather, the formation of stalactites, the telegraph, food, heat, the solar system, shown by Mrs. Oce Austin's sixth grade.

Mr. Barbosa's class showed a little of everything, astronomy and aviation, water purification, simple machines, space travel, the weather, a chemical garden, the elements, a chart of the ear, pictures of the heart in series, humidity experiments, how a flower draws up nourishment, a seismograph to record earthquakes.

Fifth grade experiments included seven from Mrs. Rubino's room and seven from Mrs. Welker's. They were concerned with plant-life, the uses of electricity, evaporation, horses, magnets, rotation of the earth, dyeing of cloth, the lever, shells, and sound.

Fourth graders, four from Mrs. Colwell's class and seven from Mrs. Mohr's specialized in chemical gardens and chemical ice, the heart, the cycle of egg into chicken, life cycle of a frog from egg through tadpole to full-grown hopper, a jungle display, a steam engine, unidentified Flying Objects and the action of the heart.

Since Mr. Barbosa's sixth grade was the class which sponsored the project and housed it, the main recognition went to these students.

In the boys' division, David Neiman took top honors for his cross-section of the earth; the second place went to Jon Jay LeBerge for his demonstration of The Growth of Corn, using various types of fertilizers.

In the girls' division, Marian Rosser took a first with her Solar System display. Second place went to Pam Peifer, for her thirty diagrams of heart action.

In the Invitational Division (fourth and fifth grade entries) Mary Eppley took a first with her incubation of chicken eggs, and second place went to Jeff Hoover for his electric air heater.

Honorable mention went to Robert Saffian for his sound system, and to Holly Mansley, for her collection of sea-shells.

Joseph Rakshys, Dallas Senior High School, made the trophies. Members of Mr. Barbosa's sixth grade formed committees for the project. Doug Whitehead was chairman; Paula Selingo, planning; Jon Jay LeBerge, art; Karen Lefko, invitation; Elaine Dwinchick, reception; Craig Tupper, clean-up.
