SHAVERTOWN

The men liked the collection of coins and these dated from the sixth and seventh centuries when man decided on some form of monetary exchange. The first recorded coins were struck in the ancient kingdom of Lydia between 685 to 652 B.C.

EARLY OFFSET

Being interested in Graphic Arts, I was surprised to see an old offset machine, the first commercially successful model built in 1906 by the Harris Automatic Press Company at Niles, Ohio, and shipped to Republic Bank Note Company in Pittsburgh.

One hundred and eighty two of the machines were manufactured and even at this early date three colors could be produced. To anyone in the printing business it was a most interesting exhibit. One could spend a week here at the Smithsonian and not see all that is offered to the public without charge. Truly a must on any traveler's agenda.

A bit tired of Route 11 which winds along the Susquehanna, which seems endless, we took the turnpike to Allentown then to 22 where it joins with Interstate 83. Fred enjoyed driving this way much more and it took us through Pennsylvania Dutch Country and only seven miles off the highway was Hershey. Thinking we had some time coming home I had to see the Rose Gardens, which due to the dry hot weather were not as vivid as usual but still blooming in a delightful setting, interspersed with little ponds where stately swans sailed about to the delight of the children.

The Zoo and candy making plant were nearby and a huge influx of visitors were enjoying the park and grounds set up by the late Milton Hershey, philanthropist.

Of course the stop over made us late in arriving home and it didn't help any to have the muffler blow on the turnpike.

THE AQUATIC GARDENS

Although there was much to do at home the only way I can get Fred to relax is to coax him off to Maryland and here we found peace. One experience he missed due to the brevity of time. Bill and a neighbor have become paddle boat enthusiasts and our husband was all set to try one out on a nearby lake. This perhaps was his only regret on the trip since it took time to assemble and we had dallied in other areas, going that morning to the Aquatic Gardens which the National Park Service has transformed into a veritable bower. Building attractive walkways among the triangular ponds where water lilies and lotus bloom in profusion as the banjo twang of the frog signifies his supreme contentment, it was worth stopping for an opportunity to commune with nature and to catch some pictures of the gorgeous hibiscus blooming near the water's edge.

Jackson Fire Company is presently planning for their annual turkey supper. After the bazaar every one is looking forward to this dinner which has for the past 18 years made the Fire Company famous.

Lou Wilcox, one of Jackson Township No. 1 residents is now convalescing at the Nesbitt Hospital, after having had surgery. Mr. Wilcox is doing fine and will be home soon.

EXPLORER SCOUTS

Richard Holodick President of the Fire Company, who six months ago started a employer group reports that the group is doing fine. Mr. Holodick is the advisor and Ed Harvilla is associate advisor.

They just came back from a weekend trip to Worlds End. Besides Harvilla Holodick and the explorers, Mr. Steve Krupinski, Committee man for the group and vice president of the Fire Company attend the WMCMA in Wilkes-Barre once a week.

Mr. Harvilla is presently recovering from a broken foot which he received while playing soft ball with the boys.

Ed tried to stretch a single into a double and as a result spent the next two weeks on crutches.

POLICE OFFICERS

Jackson Township now has three Police Officers under the leadership of Chief Robert Copper. Many people have noticed the fine job being done by the law officers in keeping the speeding through the township to a minimum.

Good Hunting In Canada

Figures just released by the Department of the Interior's Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife reveal the hunting success experienced by American hunters in Canada during the year ending June 30.

Through ports of entry in only four border states — Maine, New York, Vermont, and New Hampshire — nearly five thousand hunters imported 4,234 ducks, 1,409 geese, 15 snipe, 1,259 woodcock, 866 other game birds, 1,297 moose, 84 caribou, 3,257 deer, 372 bear, 10 bobcats, 1 lynx, 2 elk, and 783 miscellaneous game animals (rabbits, squirrels, raccoons and foxes, etc.)

Hunters from 26 states — New York leading with 1,411, Pennsylvania second with 673, and Massachusetts third with 625 — totalling 4,951, checked in their bag at ports of entry in the Northeast.

The Bureau's records indicate that in recent years approximately the same number of hunters have bagged about the same amount of game north of the border.

Attempted Robbery At Williams Store

Williams Economy Store at Centerville suffered another attempted robbery recently, its second in recent months.

Would be burglars smashed the plate glass window in the front door at 3:30 a.m., but were scared off. At 4 a.m., they returned again; but, Leland Gay, who lives nearby, heard them and came out on the porch with a shotgun. Rather than face a blast, the culprits took off.

Williams who runs the local Post Office suspected they were after money order blanks.

Mrs. Carrie Hummell Has Weekend Of Guests

The following people stopped in to talk and pass away a few hours at the home of Mrs. Carrie Hummell, Harveys Lake, Sunday July 24:

Mrs. Edith Steltz, Sweet Valley; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Boston, Berwick; Mr. and Mrs. George Swire, Broadway; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hummell, Mary Beth, New Jersey; Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Frantz, Glenn, Thomas, Idetown; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hummell, Angela, Trucksville; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Scott, Pay, Stanley, Leroy, Judith, Janet, Alan and Larry, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jones, Tracey, Ray Jr., Noxen; Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Grey, New York.

Son Harry came in from Jersey and spent the weekend with his mother, Mrs. Carrie Hummell, and niece Lorraine Hummell of Jersey, who is spending the summer with her grandmother.

A few stayed and had spaghetti supper with her.

On Monday Mrs. Bessie Frantz, daughter Edna and two boys, New York, visited her.

GRASSHOPPERS BAIT

When it comes to live bait it's hard to beat grasshoppers. Nearly all fish like them -- bluegills, sunfish, perch, crappies, trout, bass, rock bass and others.

To catch the hoppers first locate a weedy place where they are plentiful. Return early in the morning. You will find that the hoppers, still groggy from the previous night's sleep, can be picked right off the weeds as easily as you'd pick a huckleberry from a bush. Or you can do the same after dark with the aid of a flashlight.

There are several ways to keep them from escaping. One is to put them in a pop bottle as you catch them. Close the bottle with a wooden stopper that has a slice cut from each side to allow air to enter. The hoppers are easily "poured" from the bottle one at a time as needed.

You can also place a discarded ladies' nylon stocking on the bottom of your bait can or box. The spurs on the grasshoppers' legs become entangled in the mesh and prevent the lively insects from leaping out. Then too, tackle stores sell little bait cages from which the hoppers can be removed one at a time.

Grasshoppers can be fished on the surface of the water or submerged, whichever you prefer. To float the smaller ones use light wire hooks, the kind used in tying trout flies.

Most anglers merely hook these insects through the middle of the body. Those who insist upon healthy, lively bait make their own hopper hooks by fastening two thin, soft wires to the hook shank with liquid solder. Wire from a window screen is good. Set Mr. Hopper on the hook, wrap the wires around his body, and twist the ends together.

To fish grasshoppers under water it will be necessary to pinch a split shot or wrap-around sinker on the leader a foot or so from the hook.

Hoppers can be fished with any tackle from cane pole to bait casting rig. A fly rod will handle them nicely, as will a spinning outfit with a plastic bubble or a lead sinker. A clincher sinker makes them easier to cast with a bait casting rod and reel.

TRUCKSVILLE

Trucksville Fire Company will meet in the municipal building tomorrow night at 8. They will meet there again Tuesday night for practice in the handling of equipment.

Linda Gebler of Lansdale spent a week with her father, Harold Gebler.

Mr. and Mrs. William Richards, New York State, spent several days with her father Frank Jackson.

Sterling Kitchen, Shavertown, formerly of Alderson and Philadelphia, stopped by for a visit on Friday. Sterl is a young man of 69 and keeps in good health by riding his bicycle, which he thinks is safer than a car.

Peggy Shepperson of Danville is spending the week with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Higgins.

GLEANERS CLASS

The Gleaners Class of the Alderson Methodist Church met at the church on Wednesday night. Mrs. Ida Allen and Mrs. Alfred Rogers were hostesses. Eleanor Humphrey presided. Reports were given by Mrs. Raymond Grey treasurer and Mrs. Albert Armitage ass't. secretary. Home Missionary Projects were discussed. There were 12 present.

Beaumont

Christine Frantz and grandson Norman Steidinger spent a week's vacation in Atlantic City, N. J., and also went to Washington, D.C. before returning home. They stopped on the way home to visit her brother Henry Dandler and family in New Tripoli, Pa. Then she spent Saturday with her sister Mrs. Elmer Steltz in Daneville.

Hoppers are great bait for farm pond fishing -- both bass and bluegills will take them eagerly. Fishing the creeks with these insects is equally enjoyable. You never know what will hit next. Big fish or little fish, they all like the taste of grasshoppers.
