Off The Cuff Stuff

ACCIDENTALLY, ME

Eighteen years ago my parents had an accident and named it Bruce Paul. That's been the story of my life ever since — accidents, I mean. They have a way of happening to me. For this reason, I'm always a little wary about getting out of bed in the morning. But I usually do anyway.

I grew up on a strict diet of accidents. For one thing, I was always breaking my collar bone (of all things). I mean, not too many people break their collar bones. Arms and legs, yes, but very rarely collar bones. Well, I broke my left one twice and my right one once (or versa-vice). I never broke my arm, or cranium or anything. Just try to break your collar bone some time and see how easy it isn't.

Then there was the time in second grade when I nonchalantly walked down the hall and into the wrong lavatory. It was a very traumatic experience; not only for me, but also for the school secretary who was very calmly standing in front of the mirror combing her hair when I walked in. We stood there for a while silently reflecting. For a moment I considered the possibility that perhaps SHE was in the wrong lav, but I abandoned that theory as highly improbable. Then I gave a bit of a ponder to what I ought to do under the circumstances. I was about to say, "Well golly, the people you don't meet in the wrong lavatory," but I decided against it. I was going to try to explain myself like this: "You see, I'm always getting my left and my right mixed up. Well, I was walking down the hall just now and instead of turning right I turned left and look where it left me. But you do have to take into consideration the fact that I am a mere seven years old and etc. . . ." But I abandoned all of these theories and said the only thing that seemed to wrap up the whole situation briefly — "Oops." I turned and walked out. Unfortunately, this lousy, little, fink classmate of mine saw me walk out; and from then on I found myself with an unusual reputation. It took me until fifth grade to live it down. That's the year I started going mildly blind.

I discovered the astigmatism (college word) quite accidentally. From the beginning of my fifth grade year I kept wondering why in the world we always had those four teachers standing up there talking at the middle of the term. Finally, about that time, I found out that there weren't four teachers there at all — it was just that I had quadruple vision. So I got these glasses and the first thing that little, lousy, fink I mentioned before said was, "Boy, do you ever look stupid in glasses." That really ground my liver.

Then just before I entered ninth grade I accidentally acquired this incurable disease called sugar diabetes. Wasn't that sweet? Of course, the way I look at it, as long as I was going to get an incurable, diabetes really wasn't bad. It could have been mumps or something.

Well, as you can see, I've had my fill of accidents. There are lots more I could mention, but most of them are spelling errors. Anyway, I'm trying to take an objective outlook on the fact that I'm fated to a life of accidents. As the ancient philosophy goes: "That's the way the insurance premiums." (or something).

Accidents will happen. Take me, for instance . . .

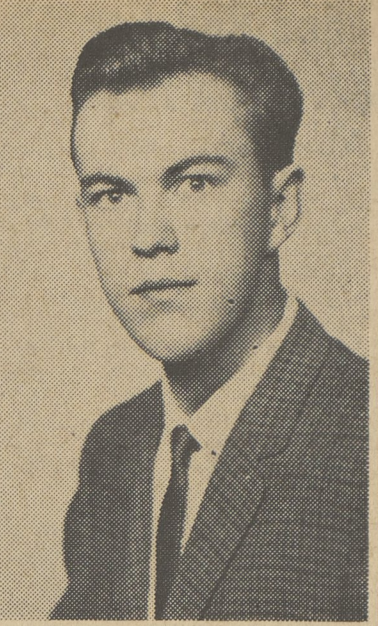

See Ya'!

Back Mt. All-Stars End 1966 Season

It's all over for the Back Mountain All-Stars after losing Friday to St. Therese's of South Wilkes-Barre. But, the local boys did a tremendous job playing their way to the runner-up position in the finals of the District 16 Little League playoffs.

The game ended 2-1 on the Back Mountain field with Bill Lozo pitching for the local team and Leo Kratz throwing a three-hitter for St. Therese's.

There was no scoring until St. Therese's Delaney was driven in during the first half of the fifth. Back Mountain tied it up in the beginning of the sixth as Herman Novroski scored on a home run. He sent his ball over the right centerfield fence. The winning run was a result of successive singles in the sixth by Schwab, Scavone and Jannuzzi for St. Therese's.

This is the first All-Star championship for the winners, with a 5-0 record, while Back Mountain finished at 3-1, second year as runners-up.

The local All-Stars started off the Play-Offs with a 28-0 victory over Exeter. Herman Novroski pitched a one-hitter for Back Mountain. The boys set a record with 30 hits including seven home runs. They made 11 runs in the first inning. Novroski had two homers; Bolan, Goeringer, Naquin, Summa and Snyder belted one each.

On July 25, Back Mountain played host to Wyoming and defeated them, 11-3. Bill Lozo took over the pitcher's mound, allowing five hits, fanning eight and belting a two-run homer in the first inning. Bob Boylan set the pace with two home runs and a single, driving in five runs. His three-run homer in the fifth started the team on the way to victory with the score 3-3 in the fifth.

The local team met Jenkins Township on July 28 and won 3-2, Novroski on the mound. He allowed two hits, fanned 10 and walked a pair. He had a homer in the fifth, giving his boys a 3-0 lead over Jenkins. Key figures in the attack were Jack Snyder, Jim Kaye, Bill Lozo, Bob Boylan, Doug Naquin and Bob Goeringer.

Everyone in the area extends special congratulations to the team, managers and coaches.

"It's 120 degrees outside?"

"Would you believe 100 degrees?"

"How about 88 degrees and a high temperature-humidity index?"

It's hard to believe mid-summer weather reports when your home is cooled with electric air conditioning. No matter how wilting it gets outside, the weather indoors is always lemonade fresh.
