I MEANT TO DO MY WORK TODAY

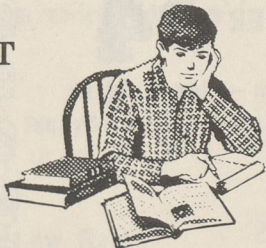

*I meant to do my work today;
But a brown bird sang in the apple-tree,
And a butterfly flitted across the field,
And all the leaves were calling to me.*

*And the wind went sighing over the land,
Tossing the grasses to and fro;
And a rainbow held out its shining hand—
So what could I do but laugh and go?*

Hayfield House
Press Meeting

Hayfield House, while still in the process of transformation into the home of Pennsylvania State University's Wilkes-Barre Center, will be the scene of a variety of workshops, seminars and conferences.

First group to use Hayfield House for this purpose will be Pennsylvania Women's Press Association. Between fifty and seventy women from the eastern half of the state are expected at the one-day conference on October 15.

Meeting at 1 p.m., participants will be given a tour of Hayfield House (they've been invited to bring cameras!). Members of the Penn State School of Journalism faculty, including Dr. H. Eugene Goodwin and Wm. L. Delaney, will lead discussions on "Communicating your ideas," "Implementing successful techniques," "Roadblocks to effective communication," and "Recent trends in in-depth writing."

Charles R. Meck, District Administrator for the University, envisions increased use of Hayfield House for concerts, art seminars and short courses of interest to Back Mountain residents.

Regular courses of Penn State Center are still being held at Guthrie School in Wilkes-Barre.

Penn State Fall Term
Begins September 26th

Mr. George W. Bierly, Director of The Pennsylvania State University's Wilkes-Barre Center, has announced that the 1966-67 fall term will begin September 26 with orientation and registration week.

Enrollment figures are reaching an all-time high at the Center. According to Mr. Bierly, "It looks like 20 to 30 per cent more applications have been processed this year compared to the same time last year."

Part of the increase is due to the addition of two new courses slated to begin with the fall term. The new two-year Business course and the one-year Architectural Drafting course account for approximately 60 students.

The Business course has been reintroduced to meet local and state needs better. The course will "provide college-trained personnel who have technical business training such as computer programming, accounting, banking and corporate finance, and principles of managing and marketing," Mr. Bierly said. As new technical developments are adopted by business and industry, a greater demand for technically-trained persons in these fields will be evident.

Increased interest has been shown in the already well-established courses at the Center. Mr. Bierly suggested that "An increasing awareness of the importance and value of the Associate Degree in our rapidly expanding technological society partially accounts for the increased interest in the Center's offerings."

In 1953 the Center began two-year programs in drafting and design technology and electrical and electronic technology. Both curricula are concentrated courses of study which lead to the Associate Degree. Successful completion of these courses result in a well-trained technician who is highly sought by modern industry.

In 1957 the Center added a third Associate Degree program in Surveying Technology. The Center anticipates the addition of Associate Degree and other courses, which are presently under development, to meet the broader local and state needs.

Detailed information concerning the course offerings can be obtained at the Center's offices, 669 N. Washington St., Wilkes-Barre.

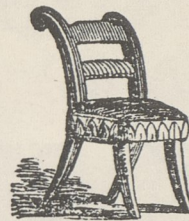

There, in his noisy mansion, skill'd to rule,
The village master taught his little school;
A man severe he was, and stern to view,—
I knew him well, and every truant knew;
Well had the boding tremblers learn'd to trace
The day's disasters in his morning face;
Full well they laugh'd with counterfeited glee
At all his jokes, for many a joke had he;
Full well the busy whisper circling round
Convey'd the dismal tidings when he frown'd.

Infant Primer, Picture Alphabet and Warnings to the Headless were published in 1840 by S. Babcock, New Haven. Although not school books, they reflect the 19th century approach to teaching reading, morals and manners.

The tiny paper booklets, each measuring 1 1/4 by 3 inches, are enlarged here for easier reading. They are reproduced through the kindness of Rev. Charles Gilbert, whose mother received them from her teacher as a child in Peru, Mass.
