by Jim Hopple

Well over ten percent of the bear harvested during the 1965 hunting season in Pennsylvania were taken by nonresident and junior hunters, a Game Commission survey shows.

Out of state sportsmen bagged 26 bears in the state last year, while youths 16 years of age or under took another 19 bruins.

Hunters were most successful on the opening day of the season, bagging 149 bears. On the second day 29 were harvested, while only 16 were taken on the third day.

On Thanksgiving Day hunters bagged 62 bruins, but the harvest dropped to 24 the following day. The final day of the season saw 67 bears taken.

More than $2,300 was raised by the Keystone Federation of Bowhunters at their Annual Charity shoot for the retarded children of Montgomery County.

Australia can credit or blame Pennsylvania if it develops a racoon population. The Taronga Park Zoo at Sydney recently asked the Game Commission to provide a male racoon to mate with the only female coon known to be in Australia. The

College Bound

BY BRUCE HOPKINS

When It Rains, It Pours!

I actually saw the sun the other day. Believe me, it was a real shock. I hadn't seen the sun in so long that I had almost forgotten what it looked like. But by golly there it was, up there in the sky where it always used to be. Quite a few of us were a little wary about going outside. I mean, it had been so long since we had been exposed to the sun's rays that we were afraid we might be damaged if we weren't careful. For the past ten days it has either rained or drizzled, and out of the nineteen days that we've been here (as of Saturday), it has rained sixteen of them. My professor of Western Civilization is of the theory that history repeats itself, and he has already ordered the lumber for his ark. Everytime I walk around campus I get the feeling that I have been living under water for three weeks. Everytime I go outside a building I hold my breath until I get to the next one. If it keeps up much longer, I'm going to have to buy a scuba diving outfit.

But there is one thing that I really like about the rain—I get to use my umbrella. I have, without doubt, the neatest umbrella in the entire world. It's the kind that has the little button on it that you press causing it to open up all by itself. And it's absolutely gigantic. I think it would cover me and four other people plus one or two little kids, and still maybe have room for a head or two more.

Anyway, I have the greatest time with this umbrella. For example if a couple of us are going to class, and we step outside in the rain, everybody else has to fumble with their books while they try to get their plebian manuel umbrella up. But I just stand there, point my umbrella skyward, push the button, and thwapp, up goes my umbrella! It's terrific for your ego. You feel almost as superior as Mary Poppins.

But the thing I love most is zapping people. I'll be walking down the hall with my trusty umbrella at my side, when suddenly some dastardly friend of mine comes toward me. I stop suddenly, point my umbrella at them like a gun, and yell, "Zapp!" Then I push the button, and thwapp, my umbrella opens up into a protective shield. It's just beautiful. Of course, it's not nearly as much fun when I do it to somebody who knows me, because they just say, "Oh hi Bruce, how are you?" But when I start zapping people I don't know, then it's a panic because they think I'm demented, and they kind of walk around me with their lower lip quivering. It makes me feel kind of James Bondish. As a matter of fact, I have received the honorary title of Phantom Umbrella Zapper of Bloomsburg State College. Everybody calls me PUZ for short.

Well, I don't want to put the damper on things, but I just looked out the window and it's raining again. It certainly is different from last year when it was scorching hot for the entire month of September. Our room is situated right above the fountain in the Waller Hall Courtyard, and it used to be that guys would come into the room, hear the fountain and say, "Gosh it's raining out?"

"No" I would reply, "That's just the fountain." Now they come into the room, hear the rain and say, "Oh, I guess that's just the fountain running, huh?"

At any rate, we're all weathering the situation as well as we can. There's nothing to do except make the best of it. And if you'll excuse me now, I've got to swim over to my first class.

Dallas vs Wyoming Area Friday Nite; Lehman Hosts Northwest Saturday

Back Mountain grid teams are hopeful of swinging back into action this weekend following the inclement weather last week that caused postponement of the Dallas-Northwest game, while Lake-Lehman had an open date.

The Dallas-Northwest game scheduled for the Dallas field last Saturday will be played, Saturday, October 29 here. Both teams originally had an open date.

This week's action gets underway Friday night when the Dallas Mountaineers tangle with the newly formed Wyoming Area Jointure at West Pittston stadium under the lights.

Saturday afternoon finds the Rangers of Northwest furnishing the action for Lake-Lehman on the Knights field at 2 p.m.

DALLAS-WYOMING AREA

During the past few seasons Wyoming and Dallas were the two powerhouse in the new defunct West Side Conference and the game usually had a bearing on who would cop honors.

Wyoming Area under new head-coach John Henzes, is comprised of players from Wyoming, West Pittston, Exeter and West Wyoming.

Wyoming Area enters this contest with a 1-2 record having been upset 20-7 last weekend by Myers, who the week previously had been humiliated by Forty-Fort Area 55-0.

Dallas will be aiming to bring their record to three wins against one setback in this tilt.

Both teams depend mainly on the aerial game so this contest could develop into a free-scoring affair.

NORTHWEST-LAKE-LEHMAN

Head mentor of the visiting Rangers is Joe Charney, West Wyoming native, and one-time West Wyoming standout.

Northwest, rained out last Saturday against Dallas, rolled to a 26-7 victory over Newport in its last outing as John Sirak tallied twice for the Rangers.

Lake-Lehman will be seeking their first win of the season in this contest and hope that their good fortune will continue against Northwest, having edged the Rangers in most contests played between the two schools.

The Knights will depend mainly on the running and passing of all-around halfback Terry Jones since they will probably go without their number one quarterback, Charlie Kern, who was injured in the Dallas encounter. Ed Dubil will most likely get the starting assignment at the signal-calling spot.

Lake-Lehman PTA Monday, October 10

Lake-Lehman School District PTA will meet Monday October 10, 8:00 p.m., in the Lehman High School. Robert Disque will preside.

Program for the evening will be Bruce Davis, Film Supervisor of Channel 44, speaking on Northeastern Penna. Educational T-V Association.

Mr. Davis most recently held the position of Director of Instruction and Supervisor of the Audio Visual Center Hunter College, City University of New York. He has a Bachelor of Science from University of Florida, Master of Arts in T.V. Production from New York University. He has produced and directed from WAST T.V and WRUFM. Mr. Davis resides in Wilkes Barre.

Mrs. Edward Jones and Mrs. Carl Schreiner Hospitality Chairman are asking first and eleventh grade mothers to serve at this meeting.

Roast Beef Dinner

The Women's Society of Christian Service of Lehman Methodist Church will serve a roast beef dinner in the church dining room on Wednesday, October 19, Mrs. R. E. Wright is general chairman.
