

Dallas Senior High School News

by RUTH BESECKER and SUSAN WIENER

As a prelude to the game with Lake-Lehman on Thursday, a bonfire pep rally will be held tonight. Although sponsored by the Junior Class, the band, cheerleaders, and most importantly the football team will take part. What the bonfire needs most of all to make it a success is the students' support. So cheer if it rains as it usually does some anyway, cheer along with the team and everybody, and watch the dummy go up in flames.

Following the bonfire, the Juniors will hold their first dance of the year. As usual, it will be from 7:30 to 10:00 and music will be provided by a band new to Dal-SH named the Picket Dance. Admission will also be the traditional 50 cents, so get either warm or dry come on in and support the Juniors.

The big event of the Thanksgiving weekend comes when the Mountaineers take on the Knights of Lake-Lehman. Game time is 10 a.m., so get there early to get a good seat.

Thanksgiving Vacation

Today begins the first of five glorious days for our Thanksgiving vacation. But like most short vacations, they will probably be over much too soon and we'll be back next Tuesday.

Chorists Receive Standing Ovation

As mentioned in last week's article, the Chorists, a sub-division of the Dallas Senior High School Chorus, presented a program for the Dallas Rotary. The total of twelve songs including several numbers, received a greatly appreciated standing ovation. As in past years, the Dallas Rotary proved to be a very attentive and gratifying audience.

Thanks, Kathy

Named President

PETER D. KOZACHOK

Peter D. Kozachok, Dallas has been named president of newly-formed Continental Data Processing, Inc., a professional service bureau organized to provide data processing services to the area's business, educational and professional community.

Located at 300 Market Street, Kingston, C.D.P. will provide for data processing needs of small and medium businesses at lost cost with the use of an IBM System 360 model 20 computer, and other processing equipment.

Mr. Kozachok is a graduate of King's College and a former IBM marketing representative. He said the need for up-to-date information on the part of businessmen, educators and professional men is growing at an unprecedented rate, but most small and medium organizations cannot justify the cost of an expensive computer installation. It is the aim of Continental Data Processing to satisfy the information processing needs of business so management has more timely information on which to base decisions.

Kozachok received the IBM Regional Manager award for outstanding sales achievement. Married and the father of four children, he served in the U.S. Marine Corps Reserves and is a member of King's College Century Club and Gate of Heaven Holy Name Society. He served as executive vice-president of King's College Alumni Association and was named Alumnus of the Year in 1964.

WINNER, AAA TRAFFIC SAFETY POSTER CONTEST

The Wyoming Valley Motor Club urged all pedestrians, and children particularly, to be especially careful during the month of November when walking at night.

"This time of year can be very dangerous to drivers and pedestrians alike," states AAA. "Twilight begins to fall at a time when many children are returning home from club meetings and visits to friends. Many tired drivers are heading home from work and are perhaps less alert than normally. Add these ingredients to the problem of reduced twilight visibility and you have the basis for the high numbers of night-time accidents which occur at this time of year."

The Wyoming Valley Motor Club emphasized that many of these accidents can be avoided if pedestrians would take the simple precaution of wearing white after sunset. AAA urges parents to make sure children put on at least one white article of clothing before leaving the house to play after school. "The school traffic safety poster above pictures the moon smiling on those who wear white." "Children can see from this delightful poster that the boy's white suit reflects the light of the moon, and they will easily grasp this simple truth that wearing white can reduce some of the visibility problems prevalent during the winter months."

Designed by Shelley Henderson of St. Amelia School in Tonawanda, N.Y., the poster was a first place winner in the AAA School Traffic Safety Poster Contest, and has been chosen for distribution to schools all over America.

Gloria Eileen Charney On Bob Jones Program

Gloria Eileen Charney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Charney, Route 1, Dallas, will sing soprano with the Bob Jones University Oratorio Society and Orchestra in Bach's "Christmas Oratorio" at the university in Greenville, S.S., on November 25-26. Miss Charney is a one-year business student enrolled in the School of Business Administration.

The two presentations are part of the gala Thanksgiving weekend events scheduled at BJU. The University Classic Players also will stage two performances of Shakespeare's "As You Like It" on November 23 and 24.

Bob Jones University, known as the "World's Most Unusual University," is a liberal arts, coeducational, Christian institution. Each year the university matriculates more than 3,500 students who come from almost every state in the Union and over 20 foreign countries and territories.

Girl Scouts Tour Post

Members of Girl Scout Troop 640 toured the Dallas Post on Monday afternoon.

Accompanied by their leaders, Mrs. Barbara Egliškis and Mrs. Ruth Rinehimer, committee members Mrs. Beth Delaney and Mrs. Phyllis Demmy, visitors were Megan Delaney, Janice Demmy, Susan Fenley, Cathy Barry, Chrissa Pyle, Cheryl Bogart, Fern Egliškis, Linda Chacho, Doreen Grieves, Cheryl Saunders, Anne Crispell, Judy Schooley, Debbie Bulford, Jennie that all friendly Indians might be invited to this event in view of the fact that they had, after all, done a great deal to help the Pilgrims. A member of a newly organized segregationist group, P.P. (Pilgrim Power) opposed this motion but was overruled. It was specified, however that all Indians attending the feast be properly attired. Samoset, representing the SPCI, (Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Indians) felt that this question represented difference in cultural standings, and that it was no more correct for the Pilgrims to demand this, than it would be proper for the Indians to demand that the Pilgrims wear loin cloths. He also pointed out the qualities of comfort, practicability, and the economic situation of the Indian. It was decided that knee length loin cloths would not be considered indecent.

As the hour of 8:00 p.m. was drawing near, and many of the Pilgrims had quite a distance to travel to reach their huts, further discussion on the matter was tabled until the next meeting. President Alden expressed his faith that all persons would work diligently on this celebration hoping that it might become an annual event. Everyone doubted this basing their doubt on present fatality rates.

The meeting was adjourned in piece and harmony at 8:00 p.m., April 21, Sixteen hundred and twenty-one, year of our lord.

And on behalf of Pilgrims everywhere, my best wishes for a Happy Thanksgiving.

Off The Cuff Stuff

BY BRUCE HOPKINS

The other day I was at a committee meeting, and I got to wondering about what would have happened if the Pilgrims had ever been organized as we are today. Can't you just picture how they would have organized the first Thanksgiving...

It was April. The long, hard winter was over. It was the first meeting since January of the CAAP (Colonial Association for the Advancement of Pilgrims). John Alden, president of the association, stood in front of the small group gathered in the conference room of the YMCA (Young Men's Pilgrim Association). Next to John at the long cherry wood table sat this wife, Priscilla, historian for the organization, showing her face for the first time since her marriage to John, which had caused quite a scandal among the colonists. (Priscilla and John, at the request of Miles Standish, had both been evicted from the Society of Friends.) Priscilla sat erect, quill in hand, a quire of parchment in front of her, upon which she would transcribe the minutes of the meeting. John arose and cleared his throat.

"Thou will please cometh to order," he requested by rapping three times on the floor with the butt of his musket. After the small group quieted, President Alden continued. "May I say that it is verily gratifying to these familiar faces amongst those who are gathered here this day. I truly am remorseful that more of our loved ones may not be present, but it has been a long, hard winter.

A few interjections of "Amen" arose from the congregation. President Alden continued. "It might be a propos at this moment to request that the Committee on Gratitude send letters of appreciation to all the families of the members who served so diligently on the Committee on Survival. May they rest in Peace."

Again the murmurs of "Amen" arose, and quiet sobs were heard from the areas where the families of said pilgrims were seated.

"I am sure that you will receive most obligingly the news that the Committee on Hardships has reported that the worst seems to be over."

"Well, thank God for that," interjected Miles Standish.

"Say, Miles, that's not a bad idea," remarked President Alden. "I hereby appoint you as Chairman of the Committee on Thanksgiving, and urge you to establish a celebration in this respect."

Brother Standish was perceived to mutter something under his breath while casting furtive glances in the direction of Priscilla Alden. He then spoke aloud: "If I might beg thy kind indulgence, I do not feel that I canst accept this indeed magnanimous honour in view of the fact that I most recently have been assigned Chairman of the Committee on Lonely Hearts." Brother Standish then recommended that Brother John Rolfe be appointed to this position, feeling that Rolfe's recent marriage to Pocahontas might encourage better Pilgrim-Indian relations. It was then suggested that a Committee on Harvests be established under the general Chairmanship of Squanto, hoping that this committee could grow food for the event. Squanto responded to this recommendation by replying, "Ugh." A large feast was planned for the occasion, and a date was to be set after the harvest. Turkey was to be the official fowl to be eaten on this occasion. It was agreed that a feast of the covered dish variety would be the most convenient, and a Committee on Repast was established to decide who was to bring what.

Pocahontas then humbly proposed

NATURAL GAS PIPELINES - THE NATION'S MOST EFFICIENT TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM

Ask anyone to name the country's most efficient transportation system and they'll probably tell you about fast, jet carriers in the sky. Others will argue for the railroads and still others will mention long-haul trucking.

All are wrong because they've overlooked the one, nationwide transportation system unaffected by inclement weather, traffic jams or the need to worry about empty return trips or large warehouse facilities. This coast-to-coast transportation miracle is the underground pipeline.

The nation's natural gas transportation system — one of the largest and longest in the world — is almost entirely invisible because it's underground. This amazing complex brings the comforts of modern gas service each day to 38.2 million customers in every state in the continental U.S.

There are now a total of 800,040 miles of pipeline in service throughout the nation, according to the American Gas Association. Forecasts indicate that by 1980, a total of 1,227,500 miles of gas pipelines and utility main will be in service. That's enough to encircle the earth more than 50 times.

Teams of scientists, engineers and technicians work 24 hours a day, seven days a week to make sure that the flow of gas through the system never stops. The gas is helped along the way by compressor stations, the locomotives of the gas industry. In fact, the nation's gas pipelines are equipped with the equivalent of more than 1,700 locomotives or a total of 10,141,000 horsepower.

Each station restores the pressure and pushes the gas on toward its destination. For example, natural gas, traveling about 15 miles an hour, may leave the Texas or Louisiana Gulf Coast on Monday morning and be used in New York City on the following Friday afternoon.

The line is checked at all times. Some inspectors walk along it while others patrol sections from the air. They check for wash-outs and other conditions that might damage the pipeline. In addition, pipelines are monitored by whole batteries of instruments that automatically read and report any unusual rise or fall in pressure anywhere along the line.

The newer pipelines handle all distribution of natural gas by automatic instruments that step up or reduce the flow of gas to meet varying demands from hundreds of communities served along the way.

Before the raw gas enters the pipeline, it is treated to remove such impurities as water, sand and dust. By-product liquid must also be taken out so that residential customers receive it dry, clean and pure, insuring perfect operation of the home appliance.

After its long journey, still another step is taken before gas can enter the customer's home. Pure natural gas is completely odorless,

Donald Bulford, Jr. Serving In Vietnam

Army Specialist Four Donald S. Bulford Jr., 19, whose parents live at 10 Foster Street, Dallas, arrived in Vietnam, October 22 with his unit, the 503rd Infantry's 3rd Battalion.

The battalion, which was formed at Ft. Bragg, N.C., has joined the 173rd Airborne Brigade near An Khe.

Prior to arriving in the country, the paratroopers received intensive training in helicopter assaults, weapons firing and field maneuvers.

Spec. Bulford is an automatic rifleman in the battalion's Company D.

so a distinctive chemical odorant is added for detection purposes.

Purified and odorized, natural gas is ready to serve customers in myriad ways, including the operation of ranges, furnaces, incinerators, water heaters, refrigerators, gas dryers, air conditioners, barbecues and gas lamps. It is used in hundreds of other ways by commercial and industrial customers.

Thanks to one of the most amazing transportation systems ever designed, the gas industry today is the nation's sixth largest,
