

SHAVERTOWN

The Congested Road

It was a real jam up on the highway leading to the Lake on Sunday with folks taking advantage of the nice weather to visit the resort area. One almost took his life in his hand to venture into the heavy flow and the weekend proved another one of severe accidents along this stretch which certainly wasn't constructed for the utmost in safety. Adding to the mounting toll here are the drivers who cannot see the logic of curtailing their fast speeds. It looks like our ambulance crews will be real busy this summer.

In Dutch Country

It was a real pleasant week in the Allentown environs where the weather was not as cool as my neighbors report it here. Tuesday we went to Lebanon where Fred had to do an audit and while he was so engaged we continued to Hershey where Susie had remembered those big vats of chocolate being mixed in what she described as a delectable sight of childhood. The chocolate odor which once permeated the town has disappeared and machinery has been modernized. Many scout troops were on tour enjoying every moment of the candyland excursion. Close by is the zoo and the gorgeous rose gardens which were quite prolific after the season of rain. It was hard to make a change from the vast array of favorites growing there but our daughter came home with "Sunset", a dainty yellow hybrid which will add color and give much pleasure as it blooms hereafter.

We were rather amazed at the completeness of "Roadside America", a neat intricate setup of towns, churches, mountains, bridges, all lighted and in motion designed by the late Laurence T. Gioringe and carried on by his family. Many charming eras of American history are faithfully portrayed and the fantastic arrangement is certainly worth your while. The children and adults alike are enchanted.

Nearby is Shartlesville, where the Dutch spread of seven sweets and seven soups enhances a most bounteous meal and delights those who have a healthy appetite.

The same type meals, I understand, will be available at the Kutztown Fair which opens this weekend.

Right up the way from Susie's is the Trexler Game Preserve where the traditional bison must remain as an agreement made by the man who made this charming animal display possible. Handsome palomino grazes here and many rare and distinctive breeds are to be found gathered from the four corners of the earth. This, too, was a pleasant tour.

No one visits Allentown without perusing among the wondrous display of merchandise available at the Hess Store and we met Betty Clark who had come down on a shopping trip with friends. The Patio Room is another gourmet's delight and again the portions are extremely large ones.

For many summers we have wanted to visit Pedder's Village and on Friday this became a realization as Susie drove through delightful Bucks County past Doylestown and into Lahaska where the array of shops have been tastefully arranged and one scarcely knows which is his favorite. Benches have been conveniently placed and indeed we made good use of them between sightseeing for Fred and I have found it hard to keep up with the young ones these past few years.

The plant booth was perhaps our favorite for the most unusual varieties were available for one's home and garden and the place was continually filled with eager customers. Tours are still being arranged for this delightful spot and it is well worth your while to plan a day there.

With only a week of vacation before beginning summer classes, we were happy to share Susie's free week before getting down to study again and the old fashioned neighborliness of her new friends was wonderful to behold. It is a fine area and folks are not too busy to enjoy each other's company or extend a helping hand.

Mt. Zion

It was communion last Sunday morning at Mt. Zion. In personal preparation for it I began to read through the hymns in the section of our hymnal titled The Lord's Supper. I did not realize how many and varied such hymns were for I had never tried to read through them before. It occurred to me that I wish some modern scholar who is well versed in the language and content of science and yet who had a rich personal spiritual experience of his own would compose a communion hymn in the modern framework of thought in which all high school—and higher students are familiar. Surely the truths expressed in communion rituals and hymns have a basis in reality and experience. I am not so sure that the communion hymns and rituals as used have quite the sound of reality that they should have. They do have a sense of solid importance that it would seem could be phrased in more modern words.

I think maybe I have just written something quite awful! Maybe the Editor will not let it through.

I will say in spite of all the above that I did thoroughly profit from the main theme of Rev. Schalk's handling of the communion theme, which was of thanksgiving in the whole aspect of communion or the "Eucharist". All the more remarkable when you realize Christ was giving thanks for the very symbols of his own broken body and shed blood, he who was to suffer to subvert the body and blood.

Along the way through the service Rev. Schalk called to chancel Mr. and Mrs. Glen VanTuyile for the baptism of their infant son Paul Jeffrey VanTuyile. It had been a long time since I had seen Glenn VanTuyile and this was an unexpected pleasure. Glenn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon VanTuyile who were among the younger set when I was pastor of this charge.

After church Catherine and I dropped in at Nesbitt Hospital to see how Howard Seiple was doing. He had surgery last Saturday and would be feeling better in a few days.

The challenge is to deliver more usable power—and the MF 180 does it!

No other tractor with a 5-plow rating can equal the Massey-Ferguson MF 180 for "muscle and hustle." Why? Exclusive Pressure Control reduces wheel slippage up to 50%... more of the engine horsepower is converted into useable horsepower. This gives the MF 180 the capability of tractors claiming up to 10 more horsepower. Never before has there been such efficient performance from an engine this size — and never has this much power been so easy to manage. Come in and see us.
