Keith Yeisley States His Beliefs On Ethical Aspects Of Transplants

"alien tissue"; a transplanted cornea, that allows people to see again is "alien tissue"-but I think most people would agree that these operations are necessary. Like you say, a "heart from another person is alien tissue, and the body tends to reject all alien material . . .". but this is just one of the problems that must be overcome in the pursuit of prolonging human life. Dr. Blaiberg is content to live with the realization that he may not be able to live an entirely "normal" life again, but he can drive a car, he can take a walk, he can talk with his neighbors, he can feed himself; he even stopped at a soccer team's practice session to kick a soccer ball!

I'm sure this seems a lot better to him than what would have been 'second best''; a tombstone bearing his name. I also have to feel as does Dr. Barnard regarding a "moral issue" and an "ethical issue"; there is no "moral issue" and there is no ton Cooley, a fine surgeon who has "ethical issue". I think we have done three or four other heart to keep in mind that the heart is not the soul, nor the mind, of a hu-I am sure you are referring to man being. It is merely a pump Dr. Phillips Blaiberg when you that performs the function of send-state that "... doctors agree that ing blood through the body and he will be in danger of his life for it's vital organs. Well, accame to brain transplants, I feel in the Dallas Area School is travel- cording to Dr. Barnard, the most that there would then be a moral ling with the NEA group visiting important thing as far as Dr. Blaissue involved. As far as an ethical the following South American coun- berg is concerned is the fact that issue, there survivors agree to the use of the deceased's heart, than eves of the deceased are given so that others might see.

I think you're correct in assuming that there will one day be a artificial pump, that will do the job of pumping the blood. In fact, Dr. Michael DeBakey, also of Houston and one of the world's foremost cardiovascular surgeons, will not consider performing a heart transplant he thinks that the mechanical heart is the salvation of those with serious heart disease. Of course, this is not perfected yet, but it shouldn't be too long in coming. Perhaps your point of the believers of tity of the human temple" would find a mechanical heart easier to accept is well taken.

When I was in the udience listening to Dr. Barnard wak, he said that he was sure the operation would be perfected to a point of where less than half the time of his historic operations wild be necessary to perform the surgery. necessary to perform the (You may recall from my article that the operation on Dr. Blaiberg took five hours: One of the operations that Dr. Cooley and his staff performed took less than one hour) Something else should be brought up here; Dr. Christian Barnard did not have the sophisticated equipment that is available in most every large hospital in the United States. Some of the major equipment, in fact, was donated to the hospital in South Africa; most of it was used equipment that had been replaced in a large hospital by newer, more up-to-date equipment.

I must agree with you that the pest in a teapot". However, I feel that it is a necessary thing; I also brave surgeons on brave patients. more success stories in the near future as far as heart transplants
