The Old Timer
"People go on vacations to forget things—and when they get there they find out they did."

Customers, Demand Clean Restaurants

Its a common situation on the nation's highways as mealtime approaches. An "Eats" or "Restaurant" sign looms ahead, and the small-fry in the back seat begin a shrill chorus of "We're Hungry." Dad slows down for a look. Mother makes a quick, on-the-fly judgment and reports, "Let's try the next place. This one doesn't look clean." Dad speeds up. And the car moves on down the highway trailing a mournful echo of "But we're hungry."

Sound familiar? The important part of the story is that Mother's right. People shouldn't have to eat in any restaurant that "doesn't look clean."

This is one of the economic facts of life that's recognized by all good restaurant people. As a result, they exert considerable effort and spend a great deal of money to make sure that their establishments greet possible patrons with a neat, clean appearance. They know that they can't survive in business for long if they continually lose customers to "the next place."

But restaurant cleanliness is involved with a lot more than just good business sense. It also has a close relationship to public health. A dirty restaurant, in addition to being unattractive, can be a source of disease.

That's why the State Health Department and local health jurisdictions have established strict sanitation standards that should be met by every restaurant to protect the health of the people who eat there. These standards are concerned primarily with food storage and handling, emphasizing that all supplies of meat, eggs, milk products and other potential sources of food-related illnesses be kept at a temperature of 45 degrees Fahrenheit or less until used. But the standards also cover such things as refuse and garbage disposal and cleanliness of rest rooms, floors, equipment and utensils.

All new eating places and all renovations in existing ones must meet these exacting standards, which are enforced by a regular and continuing inspection program at both the State and local levels. Steps are taken immediately to correct any deficiencies observed during an inspection visit.

But despite official inspections and despite the efforts of business-conscious proprietors, there are going to be times when restaurant patrons find cleanliness conditions somewhat less than ideal.

What should you do if you're faced with such a situation?... if you should enter a restaurant and find flies, littered floors, sticky counters, filthy table cloths or unappetizing odors?

The people at the Health Department's Division of Sanitation, the State agency responsible for enforcing regulations relating to restaurant cleanliness, recommend that in such a situation, you should leave immediately and eat elsewhere. By so doing, you'll be protecting your own health, and you'll actually be doing the restaurant owner a favor by directing his attention to the situation.

If you do leave a restaurant because of unsanitary conditions, or know of one in such a condition, the Health Department would like

GAY-MURRAY STORE NEWS

SEED LAWNS NOW — Fall plantings have a great advantage over spring—one pound of mixed seed will cover 200 square feet and costs only 75¢—Kentucky Bluegrass and Red Fescue are also in stock.

SIEGLER HEATERS—We think they're the best ever made automatic controls and a fan which puts the heat on the floor—yet less oil consumption than you'd expect. Better have a look now.

HUNTING NOTES—There's some great days in the open just ahead—we can supply your license, clothing, guns and ammo you'll need. "Russ" has bargain prices on bows, arrows, and 12 gauge shells.

SNOW MOBILE TALK—SkiDoo and Evinrude are the big names—priced from $675.00—electric starting makes it suitable for the whole family—try this great sport and you'll decide "Winter can be fun!"

ARMSTRONG TILE—If you're needing new floor covering before winter, we have a real buy for you. Due to a quantity purchase, we have solid Vinyl tile at a saving of 25%—now only 29c square foot—and you can do it yourself.

DON'T FEED RATS—It costs millions to feed the rats in this country and if you have some you are helping pay it. If you see one, you have 10—if you see 10 you can kill them all.

LAST CALL ON ROOFS — If it's just a leak, a few gallons of our fibre coating will hold it til spring—if it's more serious, we can supply you steel sheets, rolls, and strip shingles—don't sit under a leak!
