Dallas Senior

hunter aims to get deer number 43

With another deer season on hand, hunters take down their rifles and cleaning rods and transport themselves into the wooded areas of Pennsylvania. One such hunter is Orval Ferrell, RD 1, Dallas, who had the pleasure at age 14 of sharing a cabin at South Mountain on the Stull to Kassonbrook roads with his father, the late Fred Ferrell. Mr. Ferrell says that in that time he has known a lot of game wardens, "mostly good men with a very few bad ones." In the 1920's, says Mr. Ferrell, deer was scarce, but they later became so plentiful that at one time they ate all the feed from Game Land 57. Today few deer remain in those areas. "They have all moved into the farmer's backyard." On December 2, antlerless deer season opens, and Mr. Ferrell aims to "get myself another nice buck."

When Orval got his first deer, the game warden at that time was the late Mr. Hunt, from Beaumont, who recalls Mr. Ferrell, used to ride a horse over the mountains and who had a cabin on the reserve lands above Noxen.
