By DAVE GRIFFITHS

Way back 30 years ago the world's best golfers converged on the Country Club of Scranton to compete in the prize-rich Anthracite Open.

Slamming' Sammy Snead, Gene Sarazen (knickers and all), Henry Picard, the Hershey pro who won the title, long-driving Jimmy Thompson and the other fairway favorites came from near and far in search of the cash awards provided by the host club.

The crowds at the three-day tournament were large by 1939 standards, for this was a major event on the pro tour. One of the biggest, as the Scranton Country Club went for broke to earn the nationwide publicity and acclaim a tourney of this magnitude brought.

The pros were treated like royalty. Nothing was too good for the visiting swingers. Everything in the way of topflight accommodations and entertainment was made available. It was a deluxe presentation. So fine most of the golfers returned again the following year.

Certainly, the Anthracite Open must go down in the annals of area sports as one of the biggest projects of its kind ever sponsored in Northeastern Pennsylvania. The Country Club took a financial beating but earned the respect and admiration of those who applaud an all-out effort. Perhaps dividends from the Anthracite Open are still bearing interest. Who knows?

One thing is certain, there'll never be another area golfing tourney to match the Anthracite. The rich purses offered now make that an impossibility.

In 1939, the $100,000 a year pro was just a dream. If you'd mention that figure 30 years ago you'd find few believers.

But times have changed. And today, there are several golfers who earn $100,000 or more per season. Others like Billy Casper have gone over the $200,000 mark.

Money is the name of the game. But the sport itself has grown, too. Today, there aren't enough courses in one region to accommodate those who'd like to play.

The game has caught on with the entire family. And there's no age limit. Kids barely big enough to swing a club—oldsters with just enough strength to make it round the course—they're all out there in that never-ending battle to beat par.

Golfers are satisfied when they simply improve their score. It's a fun game that provides today's automobile riding populace with the exercise walking once provided.

Ask your next door neighbor to go for a mile hike and he'll ignore your request. Suggest that you play 18-holes of golf or more and he'll rush to inform his wife that he'll be away for a few hours.

The magic of the fairway is difficult to explain. But magic it is. Sales of golfing equipment and the many other services that are part of the game have reached unprecedented heights and the end is not yet in sight.

Once a rich man's game, it's now the sport of all. Even Mom can talk a good game—and there are some mothers who can teach Dad a few pointers.

Later this summer, Monday, July 7, some 60 of the outstanding pros in the Eastern Section of the P.G.A. will come to the Glen Oak Country Club in Waverly to compete for the title.

Stan Dudas, the defending champion and a former midvalley resident, will head the list that already includes Al Besselink and Marty Furgol.

Jerry Port, the pro at Glen Oak, is responsible for luring these fine players here. The event, the first in what Port, Eli Albert, the publicity chief at the Waverly layout, and others are hopeful will be an annual highlight of each golfing season is co-sponsored by the P.G.A. Eastern Section and two well-known charities, the Heart Fund and Crippled Children's Fund.

Top amateurs in the Pro-Am event must have handicaps of ten or better. But in today's world of golf, that leaves the door open to many players here in our own area.

It won't be another Anthracite Open. But it will provide area fans with some excellent play and an opportunity to follow some of the top performers in the game.

It's a cinch that the Glen Oak tourney will attract more fans than the Anthracite Open with all its name stars did 30 years ago. Just another indication of how golf has captured the imagination of today's participants.

There's only one way to go in golf...FOREward. And here in Northeastern Pennsylvania everyone's on the march—to the nearest golf course.

Cloverleaf 4H Club met in the municipal building Friday night. Daniel Shannon presided at the business meeting. Projects for the summer months were discussed and planned. The 4-H Congress will be held later this month at Pennsylvania State University at Penn State. Twenty-five members attended. Mr. and Mrs. Marvin F. Scott are the group's leaders.

Mrs. Hugh Jones, Orchard Street, celebrates her birthday tomorrow.

Sara Peters, S. Lehigh Street, will enroll in the x-ray technician course being offered by Wilkes-Barre General Hospital. The course beginning July 1 will take two years to complete. Sara, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Peters, is a graduate of Dallas Senior High School Class of 1969.

Mr. and Mrs. James Phillips and sons, Michael, James Jr., and Scott, Pringle, have moved to 139 Meadowcrest.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Williams, Division Street, toured Corning Glass Works and Watkins Glen Tuesday. Carol Kriedler was their guest.

Members and friends of the Couples Club of Trucksville United Methodist Church will sponsor a bus trip to New York City October 18. Reservations for the show and bus must be made by July 1 with Mrs. Raymond Metzgar, Mrs. Wilbur Morgan, or Mrs. Thomas Kriedler.

Thomas J. Harrison, 56 Vonderheid St., is a patient in Geisinger Medical Center, Danville.

Mrs. Ogden Palmer, Grove Street, is convalescing at home following an illness.

Diane Morgan, Maple Street, celebrated her 16th birthday Saturday, June 21. Diane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Morgan, attends Dallas Senior High School.

Neighborhood Card Club met with Mrs. George Gaylord, Lewis Avenue, Friday evening. Prize winners were: Mrs. Donald Anderson, Mrs. Ogden Palmer and Mrs. H. D. Owens. Other members attending were: Mrs. Harold Croom, Mrs. Clifford Garris, Mrs. William Lohman, Mrs. John Roushey Sr., Mrs. Robert Shoemaker and the hostess.

Mrs. Eveline Foster, Warrington, England, is visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Pugh and family, Davis Street.

Frank Falchek, Carverton Road, is recuperating at home following surgery at General Hospital.

Diane Morgan, Maple Street, is spending the week at Sky Lake Camp. Her brother, David, is at Camp Achela for the week.

Betty Jane McLaughlin, Hill Street, is visiting her sister, Beverly, in Philadelphia this week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lenahan, Terrace Avenue, entertained at dinner Tuesday evening, June 17. The occasion marked the birthday anniversary of her mother, Mrs. Wilfred Anderson. Twelve guests were present.

William H. Booth, Elizabeth Street, is convalescing at home after being a patient at Mercy Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Johnson, Vonderheid Street, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Aspinwall at DelRay Beach in Florida.

Jessica Lynn Schutter was one year old June 11. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Schutter, Linewood Road.

Mrs. Stanley Bigoski and infant daughter have returned to their home on Chase Road from Nesbitt Hospital.
