George Jacobs is one young man who really gets around this old globe and his parents say that he is now in Saudi Arabia where he is a member of the faculty at the Institute of Modern Languages at Jeddah near the Red Sea.

Our former neighbor is teaching English to the Army officers of that Mid East land. Last winter he was in Morocco where he came to know the Arab peoples quite well, gleaned their language and studied their crafts. So it was an easy transition for George. He will further his adeptness with the Arabic tongue while he is teaching others his native language.

In his directions as to possessions allowed he received firm notice that nothing bearing the name of Sears Roebuck or RCA could be brought into Saudi Arabia. The records of Barbara Streisand and Frank Sinatra were also taboo.

George writes that there are no saloons in his new place of abode, no smoking, and no women to be seen anywhere, remaining inside most of the time.

George was an exchange student to the Philippines some years ago and came back with a terrific urge to better the conditions of the poor in anyplace in the world where he might find such a spot. A graduate of Amherst College and our local high school, his chief hobby is farming.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Donnick and daughters, Joan and Jane, and brother Jerry, took a short holiday last week. They visited Philadelphia and its historic points of interest and then went on to Ocean Grove for a dip in the Atlantic.

Mrs. Warren Boyes is recuperating after surgery at General Hospital. The family moved just a short time ago to their new home on Country Club Road.

John Cottle and his family are visiting his dad, Lou Cottle. John is nearing the end of a career in the U.S. Air Force with two more years to go. He is presently stationed in Michigan.

Little Richard Cundiff, who was injured on Memorial Highway last week remains in fair condition at Nesbitt Hospital. The five year old was struck by a Michigan driver as he darted across the busy thoroughfare when he saw his mother. He suffered numerous lacerations.

MOUNT ZION

There was no need for my being so "all gone" the last few times I preached this summer. Foolish for me to hang on to remnants of that spell of bronchitis of early spring, making preaching so exhausting. Parenthetically, however, let me say that every preacher knows, that there is more physical drain on the whole body during preaching than most people realize. But I had some more supply dates ahead and I needed to guard against this exhaustion.

So with God's help I determined to shorten my sermons with paper limits. I would type my message and read it. When I came to the last page there was the end. Usually my method has been to make an outline, the main points of which I could easily remember, and then fill out the rest as I went along. That meant when I got going more ideas kept coming, I kept on talking, the clock kept on ticking. My wrist watch suggested, but did not compel the ending!

My typewriter got busy and before I knew it I had done four pages of double-spaced lines. How long would that go me? With my watch on my desk I read the lines unhurriedly. To my astonishment those four pages took only ten minutes!

Then I asked Catherine to read a full amount of scripture and to write and read her own synopsis of events leading up to that scripture, all of which would give the setting for the short sermon I was using. And by the way, even with that ten minute sermon I made use of seven points on which to hang my talk!

Nobody exclaimed, "Oh dear! That was too, too short!" Some at the next church said when I arrived, "How come you got here so early?"

My purpose was accomplished, namely, to go the rounds of the three churches and not be "all tucked out." Wholly selfish! I am giving no advice to other preachers how to do their thing, but I knew if I were to fill any dates of supply preaching I would have to come to terms with myself on how to do it.

NESSBITT HOSPITAL
 The front lawn is quite a sight at present. It is the beginning of extensive renovations, with the excavation over the whole front lawn reaching down to the level of the basement. One of our very fine Valley Crest nurses, a resident of Trucksville, Mrs. Alice Davis has been a patient there and I went to see her. Her mother, Augusta Creich is a patient at Valley Crest. I was glad to see Mrs. Davis on the mend.

Well, the beginning of renovations at the hospital will interest Dottie and I have written her about it and sent her a clipping of the groundbreaking ceremony. That little shoveling at that ceremony turned out to be quite a cavern already!

ON THE MOON PROGRAM
 One of Ruth's great nieces and husband live down in Huntsville, Ala. Some years ago Lucille wrote me that the wild geese flying south from Canada have a resting station near Huntsville which is their fly-way. The other day Lucille wrote us a letter in response to one I had written her commenting on the part her husband, Howard, had in the astronauts program. She said in part: "Many thanks for your lovely letter. We were all very touched to think someone remembered Huntsville. All the national coverage has not mentioned us and barely Dr. Von Braun. The Boeing Co. built the Saturn V here in Huntsville and all the engines are tested here...and when they test the V our dining room chandelier waves like it was paper in the yard. Howard says very little about his job or his personal contribution...there are so many involved...he is a very quiet unassuming person but I do know he is very proud to have had a minute part of this entire program the five years he has been with it." And much more of interest.

Her letter bears out what the astronauts have said all along about how many others have been responsible for the success of the program including the moon-walk and return. As Lucille says further on, "One man is so very minute but also one little thing such as a nut or bolt is of major importance."

Incidentally, when people bemoan the expense of this moon business, and how many people need the money for food, Catherine calls attention to the thousands and thousands of people who are employed in this work, making their living by it, educating their children by it.

(I just went out to look at the half moon gleaming down at me through the weeping willow at pond's edge, and I said to it, "Moon, you are a lot more important now than you used to be. We've seen you right up close. And we're glad to know that we on earth look beautiful from up where you are. We are glad somebody took our picture from there. Well, so long, Moon.")

Horton Bell at this writing is a patient in General Hospital where I called on him.
