banner crowd attends Dallas Area Fall Fair

Dallas Fall Fair drew a banner crowd last week at Lehman Horse Show grounds. Bright sunny weather saw parking lots filled to capacity, throngs storming the exhibits, milling in and out of mobile homes on display, enjoying various acts, and making the most of the outdoors before fall sets in.

For the first time, the Fall Fair took on an interservice aspect. Hitherto it has been a Dallas Rotary project exclusively.

Greetings were extended from George McCutcheon for Dallas Kiwanis, Earl Phillips representing Rotary, and Tom Reese, Dallas Lions. Cochairmen were Francis Ambrose and Peter Arnaud.

Trudy Pedersen, Miss Pennsylvania, wore her crown with becoming modesty, generous with her time during the two days, posing for pictures with Fair King and Queen Jack Feddock and Debbie Hartman, both of Dallas High School.

The annual baby parade was the first number on the program Saturday afternoon. The Don Weidners took two awards, one the $25 bond, and the other a blue ribbon pinned to the dress of the youngest baby present, six-week-old Kimberly.

Cutest couple, Ray Wandel Jr. and Michelle Wandel; most original, Ernest Slocum.

The hobby show did not have as large a display of art as usual, but it made up for it along other lines. Small boys infiltrated under the plastic backdrop in the pastry section, lured by breakfast rolls and apple pie. By the time exhibitors removed the prize winning food, it was nearly a minus quantity. It happens every year.

Winners of bonds are listed: Section I, art, Jan Drummond, Tunkhannock; Betty Evans, Alice Jenkins, June Herbert, Penny Sabatini; Section II, students art work, Sis Roberts; Section III, needlecraft, Wanda Blair.

Section IV, holiday crafts, Mrs. Robert Coley; Section V, floral arrangements, Mrs. Harold Phillips; Section VI, flowers, Dr. Les Jordan, with his mammoth dahlias; Section VII, home-made products, household items given by Acme.

Section VIII, bond to Florence Howell, decorative arts; Section IX, other crafts, Dominic Polachek. Scott Saffian's display of photography included some of the work which has appeared from time to time in The Dallas Post. He took a first in photography and a second in the hobby show.

Merrill Thomas' vegetable stand was bright with fall colors, Indian corn grown from seed which was originally developed by his grandfather, red peppers, brown eggs, blushing peaches, green corn.

Charlie Long had an impressive display of those little yellow bugs that skitter over the snowdrifts in increasing quantities in the winter time.

Pennsylvania Game Commission had an array of snakes, safely caged.

The model railroad set up by the Wyoming Valley Club drew a lot of attention, as trains threatened to crash head-on, and were harmlessly deflected. There were even boats moored on the grounds.

The whatnot stand, manned by Police Auxiliary, cleaned out fast the first day, opened again on Sunday with fresh whatnots.

There was even an antique show, the Yankee Traveler.

The Fair had everything, including a power roller which went trundling slowly around the track, erasing the traces after trick cars had ploughed up the ground.

Not a particle of rain fell, a record for a summer which was plagued by bad weather on every weekend, up to the last part of August.
