

My typewriter talks

by THE REV. CHARLES H. GILBERT

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Krum from up at our corner, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Krum recently drove to Hammondsport, N.Y., to visit former neighbors of Mt. Zion folks, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harris and Mrs. Harris' mother Mrs. Ray Mullison. Mrs. Mullison has an apartment next to her daughter Ruth Harris and likes it very much. She used to live down on the Hicks River road here at Mt. Zion. Right across the road from Mrs. Mullison is a United Methodist Church. No wonder she likes her new location.

150th Anniversary Celebration!
Catherine and I drove to Maine, N.Y., north of Endicott, to attend the 150th anniversary celebration of the Congregational church there, and the 40th anniversary of the Federation of the Methodist with the Congregational Church.

I went there in 1946 as pastor of the Federated Church when I left the pastorate of these three churches here. It was a unique experience for me to attempt being pastor of two denominations under one roof but it was interesting and enjoyable, for they were all most friendly people.

They still are!
We went Saturday and were entertained overnight at the home of the former principal of the high school, now retired. Their home was just across the lot from the church.

When we arrived at the church a chicken barbecue was in full swing. We had wondered how they would manage barbecuing the chickens. But they had built a "pit" top of ground with three of four tiers of cinder blocks extending 15 or 20 feet along the ground. In this pit was a bed of glowing charcoal briquets. A grill on top was laid full of chicken halves which men of the church were tending by handling them with some kind of mittens. Then as fast as the meat was done it was carried into the kitchen of the social hall and served cafeteria style to the customers.

Catherine and I wore our Christmas gift African shirts from Dorothy. These shirts were eye-stoppers to everybody. And we were greeted as old-timers usually get greeted, cordially. So many remarked to me, "You haven't changed a bit!" Which I couldn't say for all of them, for there were many whom we knew as children who now were lovely matrons and husbands.

That night there was a historical pageant of the progress of the church through the years to and through the federation to the present, written by the present pastor, the Rev. Ronald Kauffman, formerly of Nanticoke.

The next morning was the worship service at 11. The church was filled from the back to the very front seats. A large choir was on the platform. Good thing Catherine had been invited to sing in the choir as she used to do, and I was to have a part in the service. Else I don't know where we would have found a seat!

The guest minister for the occasion was the Rev. Gale Tymeson who grew up in the town. He was a senior in high school when we first went to college and theological seminary and was ordained in his home church when I was his pastor. His sermon was most appropriately on the theme of the value of the past. But it did not follow the line so many oldtimers think of regarding the past, who always wish they could somehow return to those "good old days," which is impossible. Gale Tymeson challenged the congregation to go forward from their rich beginnings into increasing spiritual triumphs, in other words to keep growing and building a better world.

My part in the service was to offer the invocation and then to tell a story for the children. Apparently my stories to the children were my strong point because the grown ups remember the stories better than any sermon! So my theme was, "The Twinkling Twinsies Fifteen Years Later." The people were amused at the fact that many of the children who used to come down front for the story in those days are now parents of children. What a lot of fun I had seeing those grown up children through the day we were there. Some had been in Catherine's kindergarten in the school when she taught there.

For the occasion I wore my reddest tie, the kind the children (and many of their parents) liked the best.

It was a rich experience for me to look over that congregation and to go through all the new part of the expanded church plant and realize what a growth has taken place in the year

I looked especially for one whom I baptized as a baby who had so little hair then that he got a babyhood nickname of "baldy." His mother took me around until we finally found him, a handsome young man with long hair and moustache, and a smile as winning as I expected it would be. Fine lad, fine family.

The process of forming a federation of churches is and was more or less complicated. The burning of the Methodist church building perhaps simplified the process. The Congregational society graciously offered the facilities of its New England style building. The two congregations worshipped together under the leadership of both ministers. The Methodist minister, meanwhile, began working out a plan of federation which to make a long story short was agreeable to both societies. They elected a federated council made up of Congregational and Methodist members and the experiment was under way. It worked for the simple reason that both societies wanted it to work. Eventually the federation was under just one pastor with the understanding that when the pastor from one denomination left the successor should be chosen from the other denomination.

Each denomination in the federation maintains its own program and integrity. New members have their choice of uniting with whichever denomination seems best to them. Each maintains its own world wide and home-land ministries, and subscribes to its own benevolence askings. Thus, when a member from either side of the house moves to a new community he already has a well-established denomination with which to affiliate.

To my mind and from my eight and a half years there as pastor that church seems a splendidly workable plan of ecumenicity. It was a highly valued part of my in-service training and education, for which I thank the Lord and the respective denominational bodies. A by-product of that experience was a feeling of at-homeness when I was asked by the United Church of Christ in West Pittston to serve as its interim pastor until its present minister, the Rev. James Williams, was called.

dedication plans set for Saturday

CPO C. E. Butler, Shavertown, is in charge of arrangements for welcoming dignitaries at the dedication of the new million dollar Naval Reserve Training Center, Avoca, Saturday at 2 p.m.

Among the dignitaries attending will be Rep. Daniel J. F. Flood, Rep. Joseph McDade, Rear Adm. Kenneth L. Veth, USN, commandant, Fourth

JACKSON TWP.

Ann Marie Fielding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Fielding, Follies Road, was injured Oct. 9 in a fall at Lake-Lehman school. She was admitted to Nesbitt Hospital suffering lacerations of the head which required suturing. She also suffered a fracture of both bones in her left arm, the same arm she broke in a fall last year. The present break is quite serious and requires an x-ray every few days to insure proper knitting of the bones. She was released from the hospital Oct. 14.

Pvt. E.2 Eugene Bertam, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Bertram, left Oct. 17 for a six months tour of duty with the army reserve. He is at Fort Polk, La.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Corey Major, who are celebrating their 53rd wedding anniversary Nov. 1.

Mrs. Raymond Demko, Chase Manor, was hospitalized last week when she was injured in an automobile accident. She was driving north on the Luzerne-Dallas Highway when her vehicle was struck head on by another car which crossed

JACKSON TOWNSHIP VOTERS

What is being done to solve the serious blasting problems that have plagued our township?

Why did these Supervisors spend $4000 last year on a grader that has been used only 6 times since its purchase? (Couldn't this $4000 be better spent on something else?)

Why did they incur the expense of buying and maintaining two (2) township trucks when we have only one available driver?

GAY—MURRAY

THE SHOW—Doug found some new ideas in paint products, lawn and garden, tools; sports and picnic items—all for next spring. He says, "It looks like America is moving outdoors - prices - up - but we'll be right."

SIEGLER GOES TO CHURCH — With forced draft, built in fan and automatic controls, a Siegler will heat up to 10,000 cubic feet—in cold weather—and do it cheaper. You'll find them in 3 local churches.

TOY CIRCUS—Janice did a great job at the spring market where she chose a great variety of popular items—both new and old—so fabulous that both "Pop" and Santa have stopped looking at girls. Use our layaway plan.

CARLOAD PRICE — We hope to sell Freezers this week to Fred Shupp, Emerson Montross, Larry Rice and Lyod Bedford when they unload the Antelope and Venison from the big hunt. We have both styles in 4 sizes—at a low price of $170.00.

SHOP TALK — Popular items in our plumbing shop are cast iron Lavatories at $21.00 and Mansfield toilets at 34 dollars. And you'll sure like the new line of medicine cabinets too.

PARDON US—Our snow shovels are showing. So are Heat tapes snow blowers and winter clothing, rubber footwear etc. including snow mobiles—we're sure you'll be needing these items.

OUR EASY PAYMENT PLAN—Covers mostly anything you want. You can buy a motorcycle or snowmobile with no down payment—freezer, stove and household improvements. Can run 36 months. Why not splurge?
