property owners urged to help prevent wildfire

The Department of Forests and Waters, through the efforts of its Division of Forest Protection, has embarked on an intensive campaign to "Make 1970 Wildfire Prevention Year" in order to cut down on the number of forest and field fires.

Spring begins March 20 and many residents will begin cleaning up their property. They are urged by the Department of Forests and Waters not to burn on dry windy days, when strong winds scatter sparks and burning embers in all directions; to burn debris in an approved container with a wire top, and to keep close watch on controlled brush or field fires at all times to prevent them from spreading.

A few weeks ago, when signing a proclamation designating 1970 as Wildfire Prevention Year, Gov. Raymond P. Shafer noted that fire destroys timber, wood products, wildlife, and also damages the outdoor recreational potential, water supplies and the esthetic surroundings which now prevail in Pennsylvania.

"These fires," said Gov. Shafer, "can be prevented and it is the responsibility of every resident of the Commonwealth to protect our forest lands and other natural resources from destruction by wildfire."

course for nurses set at VA Hospital

Term II in "Leadership Development in Nursing Services" courses will be conducted by the Wilkes-Barre campus of the Pennsylvania State University at the Veterans Administration Hospital beginning March 18.

The courses, which will be held in two-hour weekly sessions with a term duration being 14 weeks, are open to all area nurses and is designed to help nurses adapt to their leadership roles as supervisors, head nurses and team leaders.

Charles R. Meck, assistant director for continuing education at the Penn State Wilkes-Barre campus, outlined the program as a correlated course, incorporating management concepts, administrative tools, and a philosophy of supervision—employee and goal centered that emphasizes a democratic, active, and energetic leadership role.

The program is being given in three 14 week terms. About 25 area nurses participated in Term I. Course outline for Term II will cover "The Nurse Leader—Her Managing Role and Function."

A Penn State certificate is awarded nurses completing the three terms. Course information for Term II may be obtained by contacting the continuing education division, Penn State Wilkes-Barre campus in Lehman.

spring concert set for March 20

mon cause of lameness in many breeds of dog.

The program for the meeting is under the chairmanship of Leroy D. Powell, Huntington Mills. All interested persons are welcome to attend.

school business officials to meet

The 15th annual conference of the Pennsylvania Association of School Business Officials will be held March 18, 19 and 20 at the Pocono Manor Inn.

The conference theme is "Progressive Administration in the Seventies through Better Organization."

The association is composed of several hundred Pennsylvania school district officials whose responsibilities are connected with the business aspects of public school administration.

The program will place special emphasis on such topics as transportation, food service, purchasing, data processing, maintenance and accounting. Exhibits of school equipment of interest to the school business official will be available for inspection of conference participants.

As school districts increase in size and complexity, the specialized role of the school business official becomes increasingly important.
