

Dallas Junior High bands ready for spring concerts

A series of programs and concerts by the bands of the Dallas Junior High School will be climaxed May 22 at a public concert in the junior high auditorium. The Red Band of eighth and ninth grades; the White

Band of the seventh grade; the combined bands and a number of ensembles will present programs. Scheduled earlier in May are several appearances by the groups under the direction of Reese E. Pelton. The bands will participate in the Little League opening ceremonies May 16. One unit will furnish the music for the dedication of the new Dallas Junior High School building May 17.

A concert will be presented to the students in an assembly May 20. The young Dallas musicians will exchange concerts with those from the Forty Fort building of Wyoming Valley West schools May 25.

The stage band, a new specialized group of 18 students studying and playing dance band styles, will perform June 5 at the choral concert.

The musical groups will wear a new look this year. The girls' attire will include a uniform dress created and patterned by a student committee headed by Jeannette Goeringer. Their dress will complement the boys' dark suits and uniform ties to present a standardized appearance.

The theme of the May 22 concert is "Folk—Masters—Modern," with significant repertoire of all three categories slated for performance.

Tickets are available from all participants. A student committee under vice presidents Brian Davis and Gwen Jenkins head collections. Recently over 20 members of the band submitted posters for display purposes. Those by Gail Young, Pam Porter, Jeff MacDonald, Ralph Frost and Trudy Connor were judged the best.
