local schools vie in TV quiz show

"Scholastic" championships in both the Northern and Southern Divisions will be decided Sunday, when teams from five area high schools will compete quiz shows similar to TV's College Bowl.

Both half hour programs will be telecast over WVIA-TV Channel 44, with the Northern Division contest at 6 p.m. and the Southern Division competition at 6:30 p.m.

Finalists in the Northern Division are teams from Abington Heights and Jeffersonville-Youngsville, N.Y. Finalists in the Southern Division are teams from St. Ann's of Wilkes-Barre, Kingston Central Catholic, and Panther Valley.

The winning team in each division will meet for the all-regional championship May 2, at 6 p.m.

"Scholastic" is the brain child of Joe Martin, program director of WCDL, Carbondale, who also serves as program moderator. More than 50 regional high schools had teams entered in this year's competition.

The format of the show is similar to TV's College Bowl. Each team in turn is asked a question which, if answered correctly, entitles it to 10 points. The questions deal with social studies, science, language, art and current events. If the team cannot answer, or answers incorrectly, the other team can take a chance on it for five points. If the team misses, however, it is penalized five points.

Joe Maniskas remodels salon

The shocking pink curtains which enliven Dallas' Main Street are the window dressing for Maniskas' recently re-decorated beauty salon.

Hot pink—shocking pink—pale pink—all the shades of pinks one can imagine set the tone for the attractive shop. The walls are paneled in pink, set off by French provincial wallpaper touched with gold. Gently psychedelic pink and lavender wall hangings frame the windows on the inside, and a colorful floral arrangement graces the window's center.

The decor is not all that's new in the beauty salon. Linda Kellogg, a graduate of Port Allegheny High School and the Empire Beauty School in Wilkes-Barre, joined Joe's staff about three weeks ago, just in time for the grand opening.

The attractive new surroundings make Joe Maniskas' beauty shop a delightful place in which to spend a couple of hours, and old-time customers will be happy to learn that it's still the place to go to get the best shampoo in town!

The Buffalo Bills barbershop quartet will highlight this year's Orpheus Choral Society concert, May 15, at the Kingston building of Wyoming Valley West.

Ellen Misson's cooking inspires warm memories

Tales of Ellen Misson's home cooking have reached such legendary proportions that there are young boys grown to manhood who still insist they've never tasted food as good as hers. While her four sons were growing up—one of whom is Kingston Township tax collector, Vern Pritchard—Mrs. Misson's home was the hub of all neighborhood activities, and an important part of the fun there was the food she served.

Mrs. Misson recalls that her doors were never locked when she was raising her family in Shavertown. One youngster, she remembers, would come in, help himself from the always-full cookie jar, and fall asleep contentedly on her sofa. Still another little fellow commandeered two bunches of just purchased bananas and a basket of strawberries from Mrs. Misson's kitchen and assumed a hero's status among the neighborhood kids when he graciously passed the fruit around.

Although her sons and her sons' friends are grown now,

Ellen Pritchard Misson—she married Harley Misson in 1942, four years after her first husband died—is fondly remembered by all of "her" many boys. (Many Back Mountain men have good reason to hold her husband, Harlev, in high esteem as well—during World War II he wrote weekly letters to each of the Dallas area servicemen stationed overseas, tucking a stick of gum inside each envelope as a touching remembrance from their home town).

The Missons' gentle charm and hospitality extends to the present time, and Mrs. Misson comments that they are rarely home alone over the weekends. Generally, Mrs. Misson says, a niece will bring a friend along to spend Saturday and Sunday or any of their truly "grand" total of 17 grandchildren and six great grandchildren may pop in for a visit. We suspect their visitors enjoy the warmth which flows from the Missons' hearts even more than the delicious food that comes from their kitchen!
