Consumer Pays More

The consumer loses three ways as a result of today's packaging: (1) he pays more for a disposable container than for a reusable one; (2) he has to pay to have the one-way container collected for disposal; (3) he must pay again when the container does not degrade but lives to foul our environment.

Everhart Plans Ecology Exhibit

"Now an Alternative," an exhibition dealing with local environmental conditions, is on display in the downstairs gallery of the Everhart Museum, Scranton, through June 6.

Gary Grossman, industrial design student from Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N.Y., designed the unusual and outstanding exhibit while working on his senior thesis. The purpose of the display is to inform area residents of the many ecological problems existing within Northeastern Pennsylvania.

Photographs, slides, models, and sculpture form an integral part of the exhibit, which also presents possible consequences and offers suggestions on how individuals can help to solve the environmental crisis.

Commerce Offers Loans Toward Pollution Control

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is committed to a comprehensive program of restoring its land, air and water resources to a cleaner, more natural state consistent with their use in recreational, agricultural and commercial pursuits, a statement from the Department of Commerce to the Citizens Advisory Council said this week.
Proper management of these resources requires a knowledge of the ecological balance of nature, the technology of its control and protection, industrial techniques which both cause and control pollution, and methods which insure that adequate actions are taken in both a technical and business sense when needed, the statement continued.

The Department of Commerce offers financial assistance through the availability of low interest revenue bonds or mortgages to local industrial development authorities for industries and businesses requiring treatment plants, air purifiers and other technical devices needed to insure clean emissions from their operations.
The Department of Commerce was authorized to approve revenue bond and mortgage loan applications for these purposes under Act 102 of 1967, "The Industrial Development Authority Law."
As of this week, Pennsylvania industries have received $55 million in tax exempt bonds and mortgages for the purpose of resource treatment and purification facilities through the provisions of this act. Details on methods of application for assistance and further information can be obtained from the Department of Commerce's regional representatives or from the Secretary of Commerce, South Office Building, Harrisburg.
The flexibility of approach made possible by the availability of the funds under this law and the cooperation of the Departments of Commerce and Environmental Resources will aid significantly in the problems now concerning citizens, the Commerce Secretary added.
