

Sailboat Parade Marks End of Summer Season

"Goodbye" to summer was expressed by members of Harveys Lake Yacht Club as they held their annual parade of sailboats Sunday night from 9:30 to 11:30. The club's sailors make the parade a traditional part of their ceremonies.

To mark the end of the sailing season the Sunday before Labor Day, some 21 sailboats, high-lighted by flares, began to encircle the lake. Towed by a motorboat, the squad started at the Yacht Club, going counter-clockwise around Pennsylvania's largest natural lake.

As individual docks were passed, dock owners used sparklers, flares, Christmas-tree colored lights, and other means of illumination to light up the scene.

Whenever large groups gathered on docks or the shore, the sailboats carried out special maneuvers. At Sunset Beach (a new association) a display of fireworks took place. The boats made two circles at this site, forming a figure 8.

The parade continued around the lake, returning to the club. It is customary to throw the commodore overboard at this point, and this season's commodore, Atty. B. Todd Maguire, got his dubbing, just as all past chief officers had got theirs. Light refreshments were served to members and guests.

Elections for club officers will be held in October, and the club nominating committee has named Atty. Maguire to serve again as commodore.

Further activities for this year include an invitational regatta Columbus Day with a special program and party; a dinner Oct. 15 to award trophies to sailors; and the annual Commodore's Ball at Irem Temple Country Club, Dec. 26.

Weeds rob—Pigweed, lamb-quarter, smartweed, ragweed, and even crabgrass use more plant food than corn, say Extension agronomists at the Pennsylvania State University. For example, these weeds contain twice as much nitrogen, 3½ times as much potassium, 1½ times as much phosphorus, 7½ times as much calcium, and over three times as much magnesium as corn.

No wonder weeds account for nearly one-half of all crop losses—about $7 billion—due to "pests." Late summer is a good time to get rid of them.

Praise your child—A child, like an adult, dislikes being taken for granted. Show your appreciation and give sincere praise when he performs the small tasks expected of him, such as hanging up his coat, picking up his toys or making his bed. James Van Horn, Extension family life specialist at The Pennsylvania State University, says praise will encourage him to do these tasks willingly the next time.

PENN STATE NEWS Wilkes-Barre Campus

Incoming freshmen will begin their first term at Wilkes-Barre Campus with the first day of Orientation Week, Sept. 20. Orientation will open with a welcome to the freshmen by the president of the SGA, introduction of faculty by George W. Bierly, campus director, and general information by John R. Murphy, dean of student affairs. Following two days of orientation, registration of both freshmen and upperclassmen will be Sept. 22.

Bob Buss, president of the Student Government Association, will be a busy person during Orientation Week. He and fellow members of the association will be in charge of the sessions, welcome incoming students, hold conferences and help them become familiar with campus life.

Bob, a resident of Williamsport, is a popular man on campus. He is a veteran, having served four years with the Army, honorably discharged with the rank of staff sergeant. A graduate of Williamsport High School, he will receive his associate degree in electrical engineering technology in June, 1972. He will continue his education at Capitol Campus where he will work toward a BT degree in electrical engineering.

Roberta Kunkle, French instructor at WB Campus, will soon return from Europe where she has been studying "on the scene" German. Roberta is working toward certification in German so she may be able to teach both languages at the local campus. She writes that she has been kept very busy and the German phrases intermingled with English indicates that she is making progress in her newly learned language. We have a feeling we will be hearing a lot of German expressions around the campus this year.

Construction of the new classroom building is well underway and if work continues to progress, there is no doubt that the building will be completed for next year's classes. Former graduates and area residents are invited to visit our campus. They will be amazed at its natural beauty as well as the many improvements made since our move out here in 1968.

Art lovers of the area will have an opportunity to visit the one-man art exhibit in Hayfield Ballroom today, tomorrow, and Saturday. Jay Borton, local campus alumnus, is holding his second annual art exhibit. Persons desiring to purchase an original artwork in modern or contemporary design will find more than 40 works from which to choose.

George Nicholls, Vets-on-Campus president, reports that there will be approximately 75 veterans registered at the local campus this year. Forty of these are returning for their second year while the others are registering for the first time. They find the wide range of curricula available meets most of their career interests.

"Pollution" - "Ecology" are words heard wherever you go today and at the local campus, we are interested and doing something about it! Ecology-interested persons will have the opportunity to enroll in a pollution control technician course this fall. The full-time one year job-oriented program of study is designed to equip students with skills and knowledge necessary to produce a technician capable of monitoring various pollution control devices as well as assisting in the identification and correction of pollution or potential pollution control problems. The program will begin with orientation Sept. 20 and continue for four terms of 10 weeks each.

Students in the highway engineering technology curriculum this year will have the very latest equipment for use in their practical application classes. Professor John Kolesar has new equipment arriving daily which is being uncrated and set up for the beginning of the fall term. Large quantity scales, electrically operated sampling equipment, equipment for sampling aggregates in concrete design and various other pieces will be available for this year's students.

Plans for the Dan Walko Memorial are progressing and the class of 1969 is making a special appeal to all Wilkes-Barre Campus alumni in the area to make a contribution to the fund which will be used to pay for the construction of an outside memorial to honor Daniel Walko and other alumni who have lost their lives in the hostile action in Vietnam. Although many have responded, additional funds are needed in order to get the project underway. It is a project that must be paid for through voluntary contributions if it is to be a tribute to our servicemen from their fellow alumni. Why not send in your contribution to the local campus now?

C. M. to Show Free Film Tonight

A free film, "Juliet of the Spirits", will be shown in Walsh Auditorium at College Misericordia at 7:30 this evening, according to Sister Marie Dolores Moore, RSM, Chairman of the college's Cultural Events Committee. The film showing will be open to the public.

As an introduction to the Felini film, Muriel Slaff of the college's drama department will lead a discussion on the relative dramatic merits of the film.

79 members and sons of Gate of Heaven Holy Name Society recently enjoyed a bus trip to Philadelphia Veterans' Stadium to see the Phils battle the St. Louis Cardinals. President Bill Kalinowski and his committee: Bill Motyka, Bill Tabor, Tom Lynch, and Paul Williams, made all the arrangements and provided refreshments to make the day a success.
