The new service center will continue to be responsible for handling all calls for maintenance and repair of telephones, as well as assignment and dispatching of personnel for installation of new service. Telephone craftsmen in the Central Division have direct access to the service center by mobile radio-telephone, resulting in faster and more efficient service for our customers.

Mr. Umphred stated this relocation was made necessary by the rapid expansion and growth of the business. He noted that it is the second major change in office alignment since the present headquarters building was constructed in 1952. The first change was made in 1966 when the accounting and computer departments were relocated into the area formerly occupied by the garage and storeroom. He concluded by saying, "The move will enable our business office and repair service center to function more efficiently in their new and enlarged quarters."

Residents Cry

Mr. Rupe, lower circle resident of Oak Hill, complained about the alleged pollution problems caused by malfunctioning septic tanks in Oak Hill's upper circle. A resolution was passed to adopt the instant citation procedure recommended by Luzerne County President Judge Bernard Brominsky. The procedure utilizes multiple tickets for motor vehicle violations and is widely regarded as a "no-fix" system.

Registration

Many of the students at Luzerne County Community College and Penn State University, Lehman campus, are full-time residents of Luzerne County, and have had no problems in registering—when they so chose.

Registration Director Ripa said college voting will probably not be a factor in local elections anyway. "Most of the enrollments at colleges here are local students to begin with," he affirmed. He plans to hold registration drives at the five area colleges, Wilkes, King's, Misericordia, County Community, and Penn State, to boost participation by local students.

Until further directed by Harrisburg, Mr. Ripa said the next voter registration will be Dec. 2.

Scott Harris of Harrisburg, the president of Student PSEA, the college-level affiliate of the 92,000 member Pennsylvania State Education Association (PSEA), has urged young people 18 and over to register, but noted that while registration is the first step in the process—the act of casting a ballot on election day should be the main goal.

The constitutional amendment ratified June 30 extends the vote to an estimated 11.3 million Americans between the ages of 18 and 21. But the first-time voter potential actually is nearer 25 million (counting all those who have reached 21 since 1968).

Certainly, at the local level, registration records do not indicate that potential youthful voters have been quick to take advantage of their new eligibility. Could it be that they are too confused by all the rulings being made in their behalf?

Police Report

Kingston Township

Two teenagers were slightly injured in a rear-end collision Thursday night on Route 309. Wayne Williams 17, of 116 Tunkhannock Ave., Dallas, driver of one of the vehicles, and a passenger, Ruth Bendick 16, of Edwardsville, were taken to Nesbitt Memorial Hospital, where they were treated and released.

According to police, a car driven by Williams was stopped in the passing lane of Route 309 near Pioneer Ave., where he was attempting a left turn into a service station.

A second car, operated by Victor DeAnthony of Hudson, was also traveling south on the highway. The driver told police he was in the passing lane when he came around a curve in the road and could not stop in time to avoid hitting the rear of the Williams' machine. Mr. DeAnthony apparently was not injured.

Patrolman Clifford Culver investigated.
