Consumers Should Learn Constructive Criticism

An often forgotten dimension of the consumer's responsibility is the art of returning goods constructively. The responsible retailer wants and needs to know when products have not performed satisfactorily, reminds Lillian B. Jangochian, Extension home economist, Luzerne County.

Consumers can help by returning unsatisfactory merchandise. Mrs. Jangochian suggests the following procedures when returning defective textile products.

Clearly explain the problem in writing. Be specific—was the difficulty in shrinkage, pilling, construction, color loss, or something else?

Include the date of purchase and the price. When possible, give model or style number and send copy of sales receipt with the complaint.

State length of time the item was used or worn and the approximate number of launderings and/or cleanings.

Describe briefly the laundering or cleaning procedure used, along with the names of special chemical or laundry products used for pretreating or stain removal.

Send or take the merchandise with accompanying letter to the manager or buyer of the appropriate department of the store where you bought the item. When returning by mail, be sure to insure the parcel or send by registered mail.

Include your name, address, and telephone number with the letter.

Constructive returns made in this manner may require time and patience on the part of the consumer. But they also serve your best interests by helping the manufacturer and the retailer constantly improve the quality and value you receive for your clothing dollar.

"This is the first time anything like this has ever happened in the borough before. We don't intend for a deplorable act like this to happen again," the chief reiterated.

Chief Titus continued with, "This police department wants to thank the children for being very good this year during the Halloween season. There was no roughing-up and very little vandalism."

The police chiefs of other Back Mountain communities also reported very little vandalism this year.

Dallas Township Chief Frank Lange said, "The worst thing we had were eggs thrown at a few homes, but nothing really serious."

Also reporting children's good conduct, in general, were Harveys Lake Chief Walbridge Leinthal, Lake Township Chief Henry Stefanowicz, Lehman Township Chief Lionel Bulford, and Kingston Township Chief Herbert Updyke.

requirements," he said, "and will make such corrections as they feel are necessary."

During Friday's meeting, it is anticipated that the college will discuss the possibility of connecting with the Dallas sewer system currently under construction. Exploratory conversations with the Back Mountain Sewer Authority will be held in the near future, Connery said.

The sewage treatment facility at College Misericordia was constructed in the twenties and was one of the first facilities in the Back Mountain area. Improvements to the facility were made periodically as the student population grew. Other properties owned by College Misericordia off campus in the Dallas area are currently being connected to the new sewer lines.

Three Upsets

Noxen voters took advantage of their paper ballots and added the name of several write-in candidates to the list of proposed candidates. Harold Bennett, a Democrat, won the post of township supervisor with 157 votes while his Republican opponent, Ronald Fielding, took 61 ballots. A heavy write-in campaign gave Robert Hackling 41 votes and Louis Keefe, three. Warren B. Montross was unopposed in his bid for township constable and gathered 213 votes; write-ins were Gilbert Harvey with five votes and Michael Traver with four. Francis Thompson took 205 votes to serve as auditor; while Cleona Fritz, Freddy Schenck and Carl May each received one write-in votes.

There will be new faces on the Harveys Lake Borough Council come January. Winners in that community were four Republicans, including Robert D. Wintersteen (high vote-getter with 393 votes); Donald Hanson (390); Bernice Kocher (357), and Fred A. Merrill Jr. (309). Ousted from his position as borough councilman was William Sherknas, a Democrat, with 291 votes, he came within a stone's throw of retaining his seat. Other unsuccessful Democrats included Joseph G. Shappert (222), William J. Owen (166) and Andrew Zavoy (135). Zavoy, was a late hour replacement on the Democratic ticket for Fred M. Javer, who moved from the borough. Joan C. Murphy was unopposed in seeking the auditor's position and won 390 votes.

Impressive victories were rolled up in Kingston Township for the Republican candidates when incumbent Edward W. Hall defeated his Democratic opponent, Warren E. Bixby, 994 to 526 to save his post on the community's board of supervisors. Willard Piatt recorded 915 votes in his bid for auditor; he defeated Francis G. Youngblood Jr. by 295 votes.

For Dallas Township voters there was no choice—Philip Walter and James R. Aikens ran unopposed on the Republican ticket and, to no one's surprise, won their respective contests. Walter received 901 votes and Aikens, 862.

Russell Lamoreaux, Republican, supervisor candidate in Ross Township, and Russell Race, Republican, supervisor candidate in Franklin Township, both won handily over their Democrat opponents. Lamoreaux tallied 221 votes to Raymond Shaw's 187 ballots, and Race received 182 votes to Robert Appleby's 99. Lester Lynn and Janice Brace, unopposed candidates for auditor in Ross and Franklin Townships, received 272 votes and 197 votes respectively.

Early Mailing Beats the Rush

"Mail Early" was the advice given by Post Office authorities in order to beat the Christmas rush.

Packages sent by regular rate for delivery in this and nearby areas should be mailed by Dec. 10, and greetings cards by Dec. 15.

Deadlines for distant states except Alaska and Hawaii, are Dec. 1 for regular mail parcels and Dec. 15 for cards.

Hunters Should Make Their Presence Known

Hunters who make their presence known to other hunters may be saving their own lives, the Game Commission says.

Every year someone is shot in mistake for game, but a number of precautions can be taken by potential victims to avert tragedy. If a hunter knows that another sportsman is in the vicinity, he is apt to be a little more cautious, a little more hesitant to shoot, a little more concerned that another person is not in the line of fire.

Perhaps the hunter makes his presence known with a friendly, spoken greeting, or a noisy exchange should it be necessary. Possibly a discreet cough will suffice. At any rate, there should be some communication. A rustle in the leaves or brush cannot be recommended, since game can be expected to do this normally, too.

Some archers lean to camouflage attire for deer hunting, but they should be aware of the dangers involved.

While the burden is always on the shooter to make sure of his target before he fires, hunters who take some sensible precautions can avoid becoming likely targets.
