Doctors Asked to Help In Drug Abuse Program

Society Thursday struck a blow frequent conditions. at drug abuse by calling on its 12,000 physician members to narcolepsy, a rare condition in all prescriptions for drugs with virtually eliminate prescribing 'speed" or "pep pills" and to use extreme caution in any drugs with an abuse danger.

Dr. George P. Rosemond of overactivity. Philadelphia, medical society president, announced that he has sent letters to local medical society officials who represent more than 90 percent of all medical doctors caring for patients in Pennslyvania.

The letters urge them to have each member participate in a ban would eliminate the use of voluntary ban on the use of amphetamines—often called weight.

EDCNP President John B. Hibbard stated, "This advisory group will be an important instrument for looking ahead to the needs and challenges of Northeastern Pennsylvania in the 1970's and 80's. It will provide the liaison required to meet the specific needs of the industrial community of the region in matching employee training with available or prospective college courses."

Howard J. Grossman, EDCN-P Director, discussed the possibility of establishing a task force on science and technology to meet what will perhaps be a large federal and state effort in the next several years on transfering and applying high technology to solving social and economic problems.

the drug control effort has been aimed at the illegal drugs such as heroin, LSD and marijuana "but an equally important and perhaps more dangerous group of drugs has received much less attention. These are the legal drugs such as amphetamines."

In addition to the physician campaign to curtail the use of dangerous drugs, Dr. Rosemond has asked for the cooperation of the Pennsylvania Pharmaceutical Association and local pharmacists in evaluating the success of the voluntary effort.

The two groups also will be meeting to determine the feasibility of extending the effort to include the barbiturates and other sedatives with a high abuse potential.
