Fresh pears hot? Sure! They're a great accompaniment for pork and poultry. Just cut and core the pears; then broil them. No need to peel them—the skin is thin and tender. Serve pears often.

My Typewriter Talks

by the Rev. Charles H. Gilbert

Once in awhile I happen across someone to whom I am introduced by name, and get a surprised look from the stranger who exclaims: "Oh, I always read your column in the Dallas Post. I've always wanted to see what you looked like!" It happened just last Sunday when I was being introduced to a relative of one who had recently died at Valley Crest. This was in a funeral home over in the heights section of Wilkes-Barre. My thoughts were far from the Dallas Post at the time.

But, as can be expected from my vanity, I was pleased to meet this discerning soul who reads things of such taste.

And I began to look around for a subject suitable for use in this column at this time of year. No matter what time of year it is all kinds of memories get kicked up from the odds and ends of things around my desk. Once in awhile I even get to see something of the actual top of my desk which could arouse memories. Such as that I inherited it from a brother of mine who died about 50 years ago. And it was given to him by descendants of an uncle of mine who used to teach in Pine Street school in Binghamton. An evangelistic minister who was visiting me at one time remembered that uncle as the principal of Pine Street School and at one time had summoned him to his office and turned him proper side up across his desk and paddled him soundly!

I calculate roughly the desk must be about 100 years old. And it doesn't get any younger. It is usually covered with things that ought to be classified, catalogued and placed in proper compartments somewhere. I would never find them then! It always has to have space for my Royal portable—the kind that talks for me!

Standing on top of a small filing cabinet at the back of my desk are things I want to lay in sight just until I can get to doing something else with them; in other words they are things on their way out. Maybe my current church envelopes after they have been marked and had checks tucked in them are on their way to church. The thing that does the catching of things is called Mullah's Koran Holder. It is a beautiful piece of wood, in fact looks like two pieces of wood hinged together to fold flat or stand up to hold a book. Fact about it is that it was hand-carved in the Orient as a rack to support the Moslem's

Holy Book, the Koran. It is carved from a single piece of Shesham wood. No nails nor hinges in its construction. By some secret craftsmanship the two leaves are never separated but simply unfold to stand as a support and yet can be collapsed to lie flat, and yet not come apart. It is beautiful wood, beautiful hand carving by obscure artist somewhere. Must have taken a long, long time in a society where time is nothing to make pass swiftly!

I used to like to carve, too, but there was no artistry about my work with a sharp pocket knife. I had an excellent place to do that kind of carving, for I had an un-proved idea that I could build a cabin in the woods fit to stay over night in. A few miles out of Great Bend up Randolph Street toward Blatchley we acquired a piece of woodland where so many ferns were growing that we named it Fernside. At that time I was studying ferns and could identify about 14 varieties by name in the immediate vicinity of the cabin I was to build. Actually I framed and built such a cabin. I am not boasting, just stating facts! And an ancient half-breed Indian watched, and even taught my late wife Ruth to mortise floor joists, and even made this pronouncement: "Yuh can't learn most women nothin'. But your wife does better than my second wife did at carpentering." But that was about her! About me he said, (for he was told I was a preacher!) "Ef yew can't preach no better 'n yew can carpenter I'd never wanta hear y'uh preach!" And he never did, for I think he could not hear me when I did preach his funeral sermon!

But I was going to tell what a wonderful place that was to do wood carving, I mean, whitening. For there were cracks a half inch wide between all floor boards. At lamp light time I would sit in our "parlor" by the table and whittle to my heart's content. For in the morning Ruth could sweep the room cross-wise of the floor boards and most of the sweepings would go through the cracks! In my desk drawer there are a couple of wooden paper-knives or letter openers. They do good service in folding my Jots from Dot papers, smoothing the creases down. One I recently noted has the name of the kind of wood carved on it, Mulberry. The other one has Fernside chipped in it, and is made of yellow birch, perhaps a root from such a tree. The root material in itself is a lovely mellow yellow and is quite hard. On the floor by the outside door is a door-stop of that same yellow birch root. I made it originally to be one of a pair of sturdy book-ends, but never could find a matching piece of the root. So it has to do solitary duty as a door stop.

There is another paper knife in my drawer that I did not carve but which came to me as a souvenir from Israel and has two Hebrew words carved on the handle, reading from right to left the words are pronounced, "yehoe ohr"—"let there be Light", (Gen. 1:3).

Still another paper knife is not from wood but from brass with an antique kind of treatment. It has stamped on it: "Made in Israel." Still another beautiful paper knife, especially handy for the business of folding papers, is also made of brass, and is stamped Lebanon! There seems never any conflict going on in my drawer between these different countries! I was interested to read in the National Geographic Magazine for April 1958 a description of the design on this Lebanon paper knife of mine as follows: "Haddad's nightingale pattern: horn handles are trimmed with brass and inlaid with silver and dyed camel bone."

Oak Hill

by Bridgette Corraale 639-5759

We watched out, we didn't pout, we didn't shout and Santa did come. This year he arrived by jet propulsion and lowered by retro rockets. (That's what one Air Force Sergeant told me.) The weather was so beautiful, I thought Santa would cancel Christmas and substitute Easter. When Jolly St. Nick landed at our home, he missed the lawn and landed in our living room, at least that's what it looks like.

A farewell luncheon was held in honor of Fran Elly at the Angelicola's home, Dec. 22. Enjoying the warm hospitality were: Gerri Bartz, Eileen Batka, Bridgette Corraale.

Survivors include his widow, the former Marguerite Jones; son, Joshua E. Jr., Harvey Lake; daughter, Betty Jones, Pococone Pines; a sister, Margaret Allen, and brother, Malcolm, Wilkes-Barre; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.
