Dallas Students Attend Information Day

A "College Information Day" for Dallas High School juniors and seniors was held by the Dallas Key Club. Recent graduates of the school now attending colleges and universities were invited to speak about their experiences with interested juniors and seniors.

The idea behind this program was to help high school students get a first-hand account of what it is like to attend college. After a brief introduction to the program, there were small group discussion sessions for students interested in local colleges, state colleges, private colleges, and schools for nursing.

All of the meetings were well attended. The college students presented their impressions of what life was like at college and offered first-hand advice to the prospective freshmen. Questions from the high school students reflected the concerns that many young men and women have about going to college. The questions covered a wide range of interests including those pertinent to the regimen, the procedures for determining courses and the rules of the institution as well as queries about campus social life.

Over and over again, the college visitors stressed the importance of learning to handle the freedom of college life and how imperative it was not to get behind in the academic assignments. All of the college students were happy they have the opportunity to be at college, and urged their audience to find a college or university that suited their specific needs.

Dr. Linford A. Werkheiser, superintendent, congratulated the Key Club members and their sponsor, William Baran, and Robert L. Dolbear, principal, for their interest in planning and presenting a program that brought recent graduates back to the Dallas Senior High School to assist juniors and seniors as they prepare for college.

Students and teachers alike were very favorably impressed with the information presented by the returning graduates. The pride these recent graduates have in their school was evident, according to Dr. Werkheiser.

Participating juniors and seniors were enthusiastic about the program and voiced their appreciation for such a pleasant and practical experience. Refreshments were served following the program in the school diningroom.

The college students participating and the colleges they attend are as follows: Sandy Barakat, Bloomsburg State College; Scott Lefko, Penn State University; Ray Goeringer, Rutgers University; Joanne Gensel, Allentown General School of Nursing; Barbara Connolly, College Misericordia; Tony Fannick, Dave Kulick and Harry Sweepston, Wilkes College; Ernie Gelb and Clark Switzer, King's College; John Fleming, University of Pennsylvania; Bob Griffiths, Drew University; Gwen Kloeber, Dickinson College; Glenda Larson and James Pichert, Bucknell University; Chuck LaBerge, John Hopkins University; and Sharon Baran, Cedar Crest College.
