

Cooper Case

Mr. Jones and Mr. Askew both testified that they never convicted of any "adult criminal offense." Mr. Jones exhibited his honorable discharge papers.

Both Mr. Jones and Mr. Askew, married men with children, testified that the publicity on the case has upset their wives to tears, and said their children had been harassed by schoolmates.

Mr. Jones offered the court a letter written by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which included a copy of a letter sent to his Washington bureau by a "Robert Cooper" requesting any available FBI or military record on Donald J. Jones.

Mr. Williams noted that Mr. Cooper gave the federal gun law provision as his reason for supplying the information. He also told the court that Mr. Cooper later called him the same day requesting that the records not be used in a newspaper story.

During his hour on the witness stand, Mr. Cooper admitted that he offered the juvenile records to the Post. But he indicated that he was not fully aware of the illegality of the act. He told his counsel that in revealing the paper to the Post staff writer, he was not acting maliciously.

Other witnesses indicated that rumors of "criminal records," juvenile records and even of the dishonorable discharge of Mr. Jones circulated in the township at the time of last year's general election.

Stations Have Gas

(continued from PAGE ONE) George Cottell, owner of an Arco station, said he supports the actions of the PSSDA. He said all dealers he's talked to are "fed up" with the FEO's handling of the shortage so far.

"All they (the FEO) are doing is transferring the problem from one place to another," Mr. Cottell said. "New York City had a bad shortage in February, now they have plenty of gas, Binghamton didn't have much of a problem last month, now they're crying."

It's a cinch (FEO Chief William) Simon isn't going to do anything the oil companies don't want; he has $9 million worth of oil company stock," Mr. Cottell noted.

Joseph Petrasko, operator of two Exxon stations, said company representatives have told him the shortage will become even more acute in April and May than it was in February.

Mr. Petrasko said he probably will be out of gas by Monday, "so I might as well take a vacation since I can't pump gas anyway."

Mr. Summa said the problem "will never be solved" until legislation is passed to limit the oil companies' control over service station owners—and consumers. The dealers association is lobbying for the passage of a franchise bill which would give the dealer more say in how he operates his business.

The introduction of a federal anti-trust bill which would prevent oil companies from operating retail service stations (such as Continental Oil's Kayo stations). The Shapp Administration has endorsed such a bill.

"I've heard that many dealers in the region are taking a 'wait and see' attitude toward the shutdown," Mr. Summa said. "Well, if they wait, the oil companies will continue to force the independent dealer out of business. Then they'll see."

"If the public gets behind us and helps us get bigger allocations and gets these bills passed, it will benefit us, and benefit the consumer, and right now we're the ones getting short-changed," he concluded.

School Bids

(continued from PAGE ONE) uary and February would be waived and that the company would continue to assist the school district in seeking ways to stay within the limits of its service contract.

Groans from school children are anticipated as a result of the board's decision to extend the length of the school year by one day. The change was necessitated by the closing of school for three days in December and January because of inclement weather.

The concept of a citizens advisory committee proposed by Director Gilbert Tough was accepted by the board, and formation of the new committee will be considered by policy committee members Ellis Hoover, Arnold Garinger and Mr. Tough. The citizens advisory committee, according to Mr. Tough, will serve as a liaison between the school board, school administration and community-at-large.

The board approved the use of the high school's health suite by the Kiwanis Club of Dallas in conjunction with the Heart Association for a heart screening program during the week of March 25. Participants, who must be 30 years of age or older, will receive glucose and cholesterol testing and have their blood pressures taken. The fee for the complete series of tests is $5.

The name of Dianne Ralston was added to the list of substitute teachers.

Michael Slimak presided at the meeting.
