Schweiker Bill Appears Dead

by Doug O'Boyle Post's Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—Legislation introduced by Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., that would protect the jobs of jurors in the Watergate cover-up trial and the recently-terminated Watergate grand jury apparently is dead for this Congress.

Sen. Schweiker introduced the measure last July after learning that several jurors in the Mitchell-Stans trial and the Watergate grand jury had lost their jobs because of their lengthy jury duty.

Sen. Schweiker's bill is an amendment to the Jury Fee Act of 1974, a bill that passed the Senate in October and which has been stuck in the House since then. Sen. Schweiker says the chances of passage this year before Congress adjourns are "less than 50-50" at this point. Others are even less optimistic.

The Republican senator's measure would require that any employee who returns to his job within 15 days after completing federal jury duty must be returned to his job with the same seniority, status and pay as when he left. For purposes of insurance and other employee benefits, the bill says an employee's jury time must be considered as a leave of absence.

Sen. Schweiker said he and many other people were "stunned" to learn that no job protection exists for federal jurors.

"We protect GIs. When they return from wars they get their jobs back," Sen. Schweiker said. "We have every bit as much responsibility to protect jurors who face as much and sometimes more financial hardship and personal inconvenience when they serve."

Sen. Schweiker said the bill has wide support in Congress and probably would have been passed by now if the House Judiciary Committee, which has the bill, hadn't gotten bogged down in first the impeachment hearings and now the Rockefeller hearings.

"It's unfortunate that this (bill) happened to be at the bottom of the totem pole, below impeachment and Rockefeller," Sen. Schweiker said.

If the bill dies—and House Judiciary Committee staffers believe that will be the case—the legislation could not be passed until sometime next year, when the new Congress takes over.

The bill's death means that those who served on the Watergate grand jury—which ended last week after 30 months—could lose their jobs. Two secretaries on the grand jury have already lost their jobs.

Sen. Schweiker said the only way the bill could get through Congress this year would be if Watergate Judge John Sirica made a "request" that the bill be passed or if Watergate jurors should find that they had lost their jobs. That's the only kind of thing that could give it impetus," he said.

Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., is a sponsor of Sen. Schweiker's amendment.

The Jury Fee Act would also raise from $20 to $25 the daily federal jury pay. The jury pay hike was prompted by a study of the financial inequities suffered by the Watergate jurors.
