Newcomers sponsor abilities auction

The public is invited to attend an Abilities Auction featuring handmade craft items for holiday gift-giving at the November meeting of the Newcomer's Club of Wyoming Valley, Monday, Nov. 10, at 7:45 p.m. at Grace Episcopal Church, Kingston.

Among the many items available for purchase are bread-dough Christmas tree ornaments, crocheted wear, and baked goods. Proceeds from this annual event help support the many Newcomer charities throughout the coming year. The granny-square Christmas tree skirt made and donated by Mrs. Donald Horvath will be raffled during the auction. Tickets will be sold at the meeting. Other club activities including the restaurant luncheon, slineastics and craftnight will be detailed in the November newsletter.

Area women new to the valley and interested in more information about the club may contact Mrs. Horvath at her home in Dallas.

Showcase will present 'Tribute'

Showcase Theatre will take place in Church Hall on the Campus of Wilkes College, Wilkes-Barre, Curtin time being 8. "Tribute" will be directed by Scott Clarke of Wilkes-Barre, who called the production a

"perfect blend of uproaring laughter and heart-rending paths about a man who has lived his first 50 years treating life as a comedy, only to discover the ending has been rewritten as a tragedy."

Appearing in the cast are Robert Walker, Kingston; Sophia Rodzon, Robert Hensley, Wilkes-Barre; Martha Grover, Coosic; Joan John, Dallas; Jean Flynn, uzerne and Joseph Istagno, Exeter.

Tickets will be sold at the door of each performance; advance reservations are encouraged by writing or calling Showcase Theater, Box 1635-Kingston and/or Mrs. Charles F. Hensley, 146 Madison St., Wilkes-Barre.

Children's Museum explores holiday celebrations

A new way to approach the holiday season is being explored this year by The Children's Museum. First Presbyterian Church, and the Osterhout Library in conjunction with other local groups. These sponsors would like to demonstrate that the commercial approach to Christmas and Chanukah is not the only, or best way to celebrate these important holidays.

Christmas' will be held at First Presbyterian Church 97 South Franklin St., Wilkes-Barre on Saturday, Nov. 15 from 10-4 p.m. Everyone interested in making his or her holiday season more meaningful, more creative, and more enjoyable in 1980 is invited to participate in this activity-filled event.

The Children's Museum will offer art workshops all day, giving children of all ages the opportunity to create their own gifts and cards for family and friends, thereby adding the dimension of personal thought and love to the gifts they give this year. The museum, which operates on the belief that children learn best through active and direct participation in the project matter by touching and doing, feels that children and families will enjoy Christmas and Chanukah more, and express their mutual love better, through the creation of their own gifts for one another.

Other unusual activities and information will offer people innovative ideas and merchandise relating to holiday foods, books, crafts, cards and other unique gifts. Children's films and stories will be available all day, and works of local craft-people will be on sale. The public is invited; admission is 25 cents. Infant and child care will be provided.
