Kindergarteners visit cafeteria

The Dallas High School Nutrition classes recently completed a series of nutrition programs with the kindergarten students from the Dallas Elementary Schools. The highlight of the program was a visit by the kindergarten students to the high school cafeteria.

The high school students plan a variety of activities that involve the entire class and the kindergarten pupils in the learning process. They plan the lessons and make up their own props. For the final lesson, all the favorite characters and skits from previous programs were reviewed with the kindergarten pupils. The cafeteria program also was explained and everyone toured the cooking area and learned where the food was prepared.

The program concluded with a complete lunch prepared by Custom Foods and served by the students.

The nutrition education and training program is funded by the Federal Government through Intermediate Unit 18 and involves 80 high school pupils and 105 kindergarten students. Eight lessons were planned involving the basic four food groups, breakfasts, lunches, snacks, and the cafeteria.

Kindergarten teachers involved in the project were Elaine Moran, Marilyn Klick, Lucille Callahan, Margaret Collett, and Joyce Youren. Senior High Nutrition teacher is Lavada Riggins. Consultant for the program is Barbara Mead.
