Black denotes oblivion

BY GLEN HOFFMAN
Anna Walinska, an artist who has painted the portraits of presidents Roosevelt, Truman, and Johnson, is showing her Visions of the Holocaust, a paintings and drawings exhibit at the art gallery of College Misericordia until October 11.

The exhibit of the Holocaust, with a total of 46 pictures starting with her early Victim No. 68 of 1940, was only recently publicly unveiled at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City in 1979. Walinska's art, on display between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., has been critiqued as dark sensitive paintings on canvas and masonite.

Most of Walinska's Holocaust paintings are simply named Victims, or Survivors, then tagged with an identification number. However, there are three paintings entitled The Naked and the Dead numbers 3, 18, and 74. The prices of the drawings range from $475 to $12,000.

"I paint in an abstract style, so themes and messages will not be too painful," said Walinska, age 65. "The Naked and the Dead paintings represent images of bodies thrown into the pits after being gassed to death. It's a painful message that should only be done abstractly."

Visions of the Holocaust, with paintings ranging in size from one square foot to the size of an average door, feature only three colors: black, white and brown.

"There is basically no color in this particular exhibit because of the tragic themes," said Walinska. "I used brown which is a metaphor of the earth to which we return. White and black are used symbolically; white demotes silence, and black denotes oblivion which is the final silence," explained Walinska.

"The main theme of Visions of the Holocaust is the offering of a gentle reminder of the tragedy of the Holocaust," concluded Walinska.
