The bride also wore a full wreath of lily-of-the-valley, to which was attached a finger tip length double illusion veil. She carried a bouquet of ivory hand-rolled satin roses, lily-of-the-valley, and baby's breath. The bride also wore a cameo given to her by the groom's mother.

Miss Deborah A. Kapral was the maid of honor. She chose a lavender chiffon blouson style street-length dress with a modified neckline and full-length sleeves. She carried a silk bouquet of pink roses, miniature lavender orchids, an sweet peas, highlighted with baby's breath and lavender satin streamers. In her hair she wore combs with flowers to match her bouquet.

Bridesmaids were Constance Kapral, Barbara Yakus, Mrs. Jeanne Kapral, Michelle Jorda, and Mrs. Susan Evanoski. They were attired identically to the maid of honor and carried similar bouquets of silk. In their hair, they also wore a single comb of silk matching flowers.

Carl E. Johnson, Jr. was the best man. Ushers
