On the Road with Debbie Z.

BY DEBBIE Z.

A person doesn't have to die to get to heaven, rather just get on an Eastern Airplane and go to Miami. That's what I did and it was just so neat that I've got to tell you all about the place and people I saw. (Some of you may know some of these people.)

First, I arrived in Miami, Dec. 30, and was greeted by my hosts for the trip, Ann and Joe Dernoga—(My aunt and uncle). Getting my stuff together, we went home where my aunt greeted me officially with two of the biggest crabs you could ever imagine.

The next evening was New Year's Eve and we spent that at the Miami Showmen's Association, of which my aunt and uncle are members. (My aunt a past president). It was there I met Janet and Bob who were responsible for catching my crabs. Janet also was the first person I ever met who could imitate Geraldine (Flip Wilson's version)...She was neat.

Next I was introduced to many people with whom I later spent some more time. Tops on the list is Marie and John Vivona, owners of the Amusements of America Show. (You've probably ridden on an A O F A ride in your life at a carnival in Wilkes-Barre or somewhere else in the country.) Anyway, I must tell you that Marie and John (Marie's Mom and Little John) entertained me at their house (which is neater than the Hart's—we're talking neat!). I was swimming and then ended my visit with a fantastic dinner. Marie and John, thanks! You're wonderful people.

Down my list of wonderful people, and yes, they are many and very wonderful, is Zell and Charlie Travers, also their son, Bennett, (who is cute). Zell was super enough to take me shopping and treat me (and my aunt) to lunch at Gracie's. After meeting Zell, I fell in love with her and her Cadillac. (Remember, I'm a car lover). A few nights later (at Turnberry Isle—which I'll tell you about later) I met a girl named Susie who is a friend of Zell's. I learned a lot about the younger crowd from Susie and hopefully I now have a new friend who will keep in touch. Thanks to the Travers for their hospitality. (P.S. Charlie is a football fan and attended the big Miami game when I was down south.)

Mary Lou and Irving Zaitshik reside at the famous Sea Court Towers on Miami Beach and every time I saw Mary Lou, she looked stunning. If you ever want to see a well dressed person, Mary Lou is it. Mary Lou was one of the people who I had only seen (met) recently on New Year's Eve and who made me feel like I had known the whole crowd my entire life. Mary Lou and Irving, my words to you are good luck on your March cruise! Send me a post card.

Southern tradition for New Year's Day includes black-eyed peas and it was new to me. With the help of Tony and Polly Bush, my aunt's neighbors, I was able to have my picture taken in every stance possible and enjoy the most heavenly southern food and tradition ever. I'm waiting for the photos, Tony. (If you're visiting your relatives up north, stop by.)

Not going to the beach in January would be like going to the ski slopes and not skiing down the hill. Of course I went to the beach and I have Gary Bordman, son of Bobbi and Ernie Bordman to thank for that. My social activities coordinator (My Aunt Ann) arranged for me to spend a sunny day with Gary at Hollywood Beach and that's exactly what I did. The water was superb and my host, Gary, was the best person anyone could ask for to spend a day at the beach. (Gary even loves video games—like I said, it was a perfect vacation). Thanking the Bordman's is the least I could do—my reciprocal offer to them would be come north and let me take you skiing.

Remember your last trip to New Jersey (Atlantic City). I'm sure the million dollar pier strikes a note. Well, moi spent a Saturday afternoon in the presence (over lunch) at Jane Tubis' table. Jane is the former owner of the pier and is truly a lovely person. I'm telling you guys heaven couldn't be better.

A last roundup of some of the people I met. If I exclude anyone it's not because I didn't like you, but rather I was overwhelmed with 12 wonderful days of Florida, and a very short memory capacity. (It's that southern air that makes me forget.) Anyway, Jeanne, Mae, Florence, Rosita, Judy, Belle and Eileen, Agnes, Elsie, Lill, Mae McKee, Nova and Louis Dell. I love you all.

Before I forget, I briefly want to mention that I spent one evening at the one and only Turnberry Isle, home of all the famous people who are living in the condominiums in Florida. The place is so exclusive my aunt had a fit when I went wandering (more like snooping) around the place. I'm still out of sorts from the new Continentals and Cadillacs I was in and the places and people I met. I hope they all realize how impressive they were and that I'm definitely going to try to coordinate another trip down South. Meanwhile, hand me the snow shovel. All jokes aside it's really snowing outside.

Centermoreland scouts selling cookies

More than twoscore girl scouts of Centermoreland lauched their annual Girl Scout 'cookie sale' on Saturday and the initial reports were encouraging. The sale will continue through Feb. 11, Mrs. Ama DeGraw, Centermoreland Girl Scout leader, announced and requested the support and cooperation of homeowners in the Back Country area.

The Centermoreland Girl Scouts, unlike those in the areas covered by the Penns Woods Council, which includes most of Luzerne County, will have the cookies available for immediate purchase when they make their home calls.

Centermoreland Girl Scout troops engaged in the sale of the cookies include 10 members of Cadette Troop 500, of which Mrs. DeGraw and Mrs. Sharon Dixon are leaders; 18 members of Junior Troop 263 of which Mrs. Carla Anthony, Mrs. Pat Dulsky, Mrs. Gloria Rought and Mrs. Ama DeGraw are leaders.

Probably the most enthusiastic of the three Centermoreland Girl Scout Troops engaged in the cookie sale are the 14 members of Brownie Troop 436 of which Mrs.

Emily Considine is troop leader and Mrs. Diane Dymond, assistant leader. Hoping to earn a

'troop cookieship' by selling at least 40 boxes of cookies for each of the 14 members, the Brownies were out early Saturday morning when the cookie sale got underway.
