Who Needs Poison Control?

"Children Act Fast...So Do Poisons." Such is the theme of Poison Prevention Week, March 20-26. We realize that stressing the importance of maintaining safety for our youngsters, with the same old hints and reminders comes off as trite and repetitious.

We know that everyone already keeps household chemicals and medicines out of reach of our children. Surely we all store internal medicines separately from household products. And we never give medicines in the dark, or take them in front of the very young who might take it into their heads to

Since we are all well aware of how to keep our toddlers safe from poison, there is no real need to remind anyone to keep items in their original safety containers or to leave original labels on all products, and read them before use.

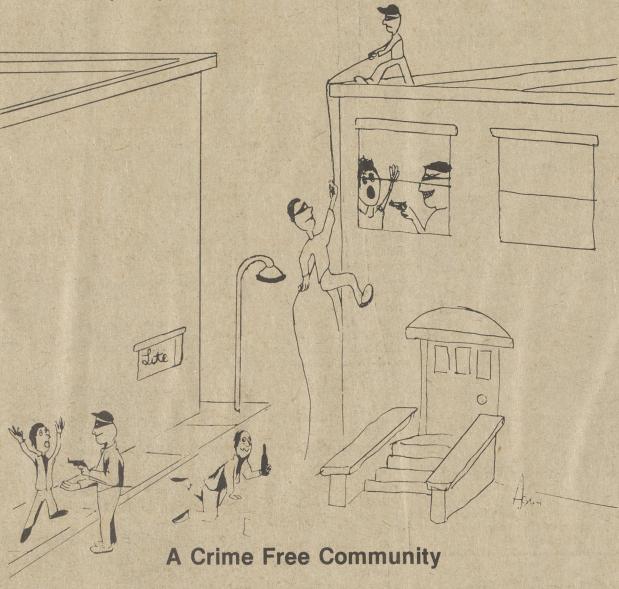

With all of us being neat and organized around the house, there is also no need to remind anyone to clean out the medicine chest from time to time, or to dispose of medicines when the illness for which they were prescribed is over. And, it is certainly not necessary to mention the need for using safety packaging properly by closing the containers securely after use, especially when there are very young children in the home.

With knowledge of modern child psychology a fact of life for all parents, it is also redundant to note that there are better methods of getting medicine into a child then referring to it as "candy."

prevention in dead earnest, as it is intended, we realize there is little Since we already take poison need to print the following telephone number, 275-6116, the Susquehanna Poison Control Center number. But, we will anyway.

A Little Fact; A Little Fancy from Mak

March 20 to 26 is Pennsylvania 4-H Week. Theme for the week is "4-H--A Place To Belong." 4-H is growing across the Commonwealth as more and more people find out that is has something for everyone. In 1982, 91,655 Pennsylvania youths, ages 8-19, belonged to 4-H. Nearly 58 percent of that group were girls; 42 percent were boys.

Through their involvement in 4-H projects, the youths learn about practical things like sewing buttons and raising animals. They learn responsibility, develop new skills and meet new friends.

More than 12,500 adults were involved in 4-H as volunteer leaders

4-H is really far more diverse than its title might connote. 4-H offers more than 100 different projects that young people can explore to find out what interests them and where their talents lay. This variety is reflected in some famous 4-H alumni, including Dolly Parton, Johnny Bench, Ed Muskie, Popcorn King Orville Redenbacher, Don Meredity, Roy Rogers, Jacqueline Kennedy, jockey Steve Cauthen, astronaut Alan Shephard, Jr., opera star Sherrill Milnes, presidential advisor David Stockman and race car driver Richard Petty. Although not every former 4-Her is famous, most become successful in their careers, and 4-H takes some of the credit. Interested? Call Chris Tomascik at the Luzerne County Extension Office, 825-1712 or 459-0736, ext. 712.

Aside from 4-H week, Pennsylvania also celebrates several more proclaimed "weeks" in March. Did you know that March 6-12 was Women's History Week? The celebration was proclaimed by Gov. Thornburgh in order to focus special attention on women's contributions to the history of the Commonwealth and the nation.

And March 13-19 was "Employ the Older Worker Week." In signing this proclamation, the governor urged all citizens to cooperate with the Departments of Aging, Labor and Industry, and various private and federally-sponsored older worker programs, and to support the worthwhile attempts being made to help our older Pennsylvanians find and retain rewarding jobs. He noted and this is the heart of the matter that our older workers possess a lifetime of talent that should not and cannot be wasted!

Coming up in April, we have yet another governmental proclamation - "Child Abuse Prevention Month." Considering the seriousness of some of the governor's proclamations, I only hope he is able to do more than simply sign a document specifying a segment of time to recognize a problem or institution deserving of our consideration.

Some notes from area hospitals. Wilkes-Barre General has been offering free parkade parking to all hospital patients since the middle of the month. Day shift employees also get free parking and transportation to and from one of the hospital's satellite lots, free of charge. That's the kind of consideration and caring attitude one might logically expect, in a hospital setting.

Accommodations are for persons traveling more than 50 miles to visit related patients at the center during the period of April 2-4. The inn is located just four miles from the center.

And, from Nancy Kozemchak, at the Back Mountain Library, some information about several new books there:

"Arab Reach," by Hoag Levins, is the story of how billions of petrodollars have been transformed into political power. This is the story of the secret war against Israel, using an interplay of money and diplomacy, (which are more effective than weapons).

"The Attorney Conspiracy," by C. Terry Cline, is a riveting and original novel. The richest man in America is shot down in cold blood in his gracious home in Georgia, while his wife is present. The shooter is the esteemed duputy director of the CIA. What is behind it and why?

"Samaritan," by Philippe Van Rindt, is a mesmerizing thriller, a cold-war bolt of lightning that explodes into one of the most spellbinding stories of our time. The involves Cardinal Stanislawski, Bishop of Warsaw, who also has rallied the dissdent underground.

If you want to learn a lot-READ a lot! No matter what you're interested in, the library has something for you. They're all neatly sorted, labeled, and shelved waiting for you!

Some good news has come out of the state capital lately. There will be no need for a tuition increase during the coming year at Pennsylvania's 14 state-owned colleges. Gov. Thornburgh's budget proposal for the schools includes a $5 million boost in aid and another $6 million could be freed up by changes in the pension system. Faculty and staff members might not be too happy with the tuition stabilization, how-Education Secretary Designate Robert Wilburn recently informed the House Appropriations Committee that faculty and staff salaries will not be increased for the coming year.

Tatoo Dogs for Safety

Dear Editor: We have been breeding and showing dogs for over 25 years, and for many years we have been tattooing our dogs for safety's sake. Finally, we began to tattoo dogs for clubs and to hold tattoo clinics, as well as work with the National

Dog Registry. Now, the state offers a lifetime dog license to residents who have their dog tattooed. Due to the many inquiries we have received on this subject. I felt it would benefit all if an article appeared explaining this

The primary purpose of tattooing you pet is to eliminate the danger of stealing of a dog for resale to laboratories, puppy mills for breeding, or as pets, as well as that of having them lost and never found due to lack of identification.

Tattoo registration with the NDR is one of the best ways to protect your pet. The owner's Social Security number is tattooed on the inside right hind leg and the owner reigsters the number with the NDR. Stolen or lost dogs can be reunited with owners through NDR's 24-hour identify show or traveling pets. Another way is with the lifetime license, which is more reasonable than a yearly one. (Dogs already tattooed can still obtain a lifetime license using the existing number, service. This is still the best way to and if they are already registered with NDR, it's double protection.) To obtain a lifetime license for your dog, call the county courthouse. If the dog is not already tattooed, obtain an assigned number and have it tattooed with the number. They you can receive the lifetime license.

The new license law should encourage dog owners to take advantage of this safe, painless and reasonable way to protect their pets. Legal change of ownership is easily managed.

Anyway you look at it, having your pet tattooed is the safest and best protection you can get against having your dog lost or stolen.

Ready for Recovery?

Dear Editor:

As more and more of the economic indicators point to a recovery, it may be well to ask if we are ready for it. "Certainly," you say, "for I have wanted this very much for quite some time." But does that mean you are ready for it?

For as surely as we need to prepare for the storm, we must prepare for the sunshine. But what sort of preparation does one need for prosperity? Would it not be wise to be geared for better times by looking to the three basic levels: physical, emotional and spiritual?

Recession brings depression, which brings low energy levels. Maybe the winter has brought on a few extra pounds or loosened some muscles. Start today, set a goal by getting in shape for summer. Begin at home by doing simple exercises. You don't need an exercise club or fancy equipment, just determina-

Second, be prepared emotionally for the recovery. The best way, the only way, is to bury all the recession created emotions you carry with you. Start these new, good times fresh and alive. "But how do you do that?" you ask. Forgive. There is nothing that releases more joy, than when you forgive. The attitude of forgiveness is the greatest emotional healer ever construed.

Lastly and most importantly, go back to church. Find a church, bible study or prayer meeting where you feel God is present. Deeply commit yourself to be an active part of it.

If you can do these three things you'll be ready for the recovery; in fact you'll be ready for anything. Michael J. Cybulski
