

THE DALLAS POST

GREETING THE BUNNY: Jamie Simon heads up a long line of expectant youngsters waiting to greet old floppy ears himself.

THEY FOUND THEIR EGGS: Peter Dombroski, Ruthie Kennedy and Kassie Kennedy found their peanut butter eggs and look forward to digging in.

IT'S HERE SOMEWHERE: Michael Casey knows there's a prize Easter egg in the bail of hay. But it's hard to find it when the photographer is telling him to smile.

WHAT'S AN EASTER EGG HUNT?: Greg Woronko appears a bit confused by all the activity.

Children Enjoy Easter Egg Hunt

Easter Egg Hunts are a special highlight of the season and the Back Mountain was alive with them last weekend. One big hunt held yearly is sponsored by the Dallas Junior Woman's Club. Approximately 500 children enjoyed hunting for peanut butter Easter eggs on Saturday at the Dallas Township Elementary School. Each child kept the egg and each egg was marked with a prize number. Refreshments were also available in the cafeteria and the Bunny was on hand to greet the youngsters. Parents brought cameras to capture their young ones on film with the bunny, and Dallas Post photographer, Mark Moran snapped the children in action.

A GOOD TURNOUT: The turnout for the Dallas Junior Woman's Club Annual Easter Egg Hunt was, as usual, very good. About 500 children gathered for the search.

WITH BASKET IN HAND: Joshua and Christy Evans wait patiently for their prizes, hoping for something good to eat.

I'LL FIND ONE FOR YOU: So says Mike Woronko to brother Will. All children participating in the hunt received prizes.
