Joseph's Hospital and the St. Francis Night and Family Shelters in Georgetown. Guyanese Sisters also work in schools and an orphanage. Guyana has serious economic problems, which makes it difficult to provide health care. There is hardly anything that can be bought. The donations of North American Sisters have been instrumental in obtaining drugs, donations of supplies, equipment and personnel to assist their Guyanese Sisters to carry out their ministry in this bankrupt country.

Sr. Mary Ann, provincial administrator of the Scranton Province at the Provincialate in Dallas, and Sr. Ann, director of personal development, have traveled to Guyana to continue the practice of annual visits to all the Sisters in the Province and to assure the Guyanese of the continued love and support of all their Sisters.
