Big Top Comes to Dallas

Since the days when Phillip Astley formed the first modern-day circus in London, England, in 1769, no circus has considered itself complete without the presentation of thoroughbred horsemanship, and of all equestrian acts, none offers more thrills, spills, grace and excitement than a bareback riding troupe. The Loyal-Repinski Troupe of bareback riders is no exception. The fifth generation of a circus family that traces its roots back to northern Italy, this youthful group promises to astound both young and old alike when they present their dashing routine with the Hoxie Bros. & Great American Combined Circus on Saturday, May 21 in Dallas, Pa.

Sad to say, however, the high cost of present-day road transportation has meant that fewer and fewer of the large bareback riding teams are still on tour. Circusgoers who are lucky enough to see the fast-paced trick riding display under the big top at Dallas Township Athletic Field will thus experience a display of horsemanship not likely to be seen again.

Adding to the atmosphere is that the Circus presents its performances under an old-time circus big top tent, one of less than a dozen that still travels the roads of North America.

For Allen C. Hill, Producer of the Hoxie Bros. & Great American Circus, it is acts such as the Loyal-Repinski Troupe that make his own dream come true to preserve the traditional American circus. "The Hoxie Bros. & Great American Circus provides the very essence of Circus", says Hill. "a few magical hours of dazzling marvels, romance and incomparable entertainment that materializes mysteriously in a country town or suburb, and is gone just as mysteriously with the next morning's light."

In addition to the Loyal-Repinski riding act, showgoers will see a herd of elephants, trained dogs and ponies, wacky clowns, jugglers, acrobats, and a hair-raising stunt in which a pretty girl drinks tea while suspended mid-air by her hair.

"This is a real old-fashioned circus like our Grandparents knew" says the Kiwanis Club of Dallas who are presenting the circus as a community project.

Best yet, the Hoxie Bros. & Great American Circus might also be the great American family entertainment bargain. Children's tickets are just $3.50 and adults are $4.50. There are no reserved seats inside the Big Top. The midway opens one hour before showtime. Shows are at 2 p.m. and 5:30 p.m.
