Mary Slaby is Honored

Mary Slaby of Dallas was presented with the "Member-of-the-Year Award" of the Luzerne County Reading Council at its recent meeting at the Dorothy Dickson Darte Center for the Performing Arts at Wilkes College. A pin and certificate were presented by Nancy Wallace, Council President, as a token of the Council's appreciation, esteem and affection, and in recognition of Mrs. Slaby's efforts on the Council's behalf. Patricia Kearns, President of the Keystone State Reading Association, offered congratulations. Mrs. Slaby is a charter member of the Council, was active in its formation and served on the executive board. In her capacity as Publicity Chairperson, she has been responsible for publicizing meetings in the newspaper, on radio and on television. Recently, she was active in bringing to the public's attention the proposed curriculum requirement changes being considered by the Pennsylvania State Board of Education. She arranged for Dr. Jack Cassidy, immediate past president of the International Reading Association, to give a presentation and to answer telephoned questions on the Andy Thomas Show prior to his lecture on May 18 to council members and guests.

Mrs. Slaby resides with her husband John and 3-year old daughter, Melissa, on Pioneer Avenue in Dallas.
