Golfing With The Big Guys

By LEE L. RICHARDS

I took in the annual press day for the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic at Kingsmill Golf Course in Williamsburg, VA, last week. Calvin Peete, the defending champ, was on hand for interviews along with Curtis Strange, Kingsmill's touring pro.

The confab was very informative and both golfers showed a lot of humor. Orlon Burkhardt, chairman of the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic, mentioned to Strange that it must have been nice to play a final round (Kemper Open) in the sun for a change.

Strange, who has been in a mild slump lately, replied, "For me personally, it was just nice getting an opportunity to play on Sunday." Strange has missed several cuts.

Calvin Peete showed a lot of style in field questions from the large group of media people.

He brought down the house when asked if his lifestyle had changed in the last year since he won over $300,000 and recently captured another first in the Atlanta Classic.

"Not necessarily," said Peete. "My wife, Christine, still tells me where to go, when to be there and what time I'm scheduled to play."

Peete arrived from England last Sunday night in New York, then flew to Norfolk early Monday morning.

I was particularly impressed with Peete's modesty. He still makes appearances on the second tour just to hype the gate.

"I try to play several times a year on the second tour. I feel it's my duty, because that is where I got my start and I owe the game of golf something," he said.

When asked for any tips for us amateurs, Peete was quick to give advice to everyone that asked.

"One phase which has been a big help to me is setting up properly to your target and having the proper balance. These are two reasons which help my consistency. That and a lot of practice. You've got to practice to find the right tempo," he added.

After the gathering, we had a nice lunch, then teed it up on the plush Kingsmill Golf Course. It was a treat to finally play on a course with slick greens and firm fairways. I really enjoyed the back nine which will be shown on NBC TV.

No matter where you hit the ball, you didn't have to touch it. My favorite hole is the 18th. I sat between the 16th, 17th holes and 18th tee last year when I attended the tourney. I got a bit lucky from the championship tee on the final hole, hitting a long crisp drive, then a nine iron to the green and sank the putt for my only bird. I couldn't believe the action I got on the ball from the fairways. It's a super treat.

I'm looking forward to attending the tournament which is scheduled for July 21-24. The people running the Anheuser-Busch Classic have gone to great lengths to make it an enjoyable week for the pros and their families.

CLIPBOARD NOTES: Our Northeastern Pennsylvania Golf Directory is complete, and I'd like to thank the advertisers who made it all possible. I'm hoping next year we'll have even more so we can expand the publication. My chief purpose is to help promote amateur golf in Northeastern Pennsylvania.

Rumor making rounds last week has former Pitt Coach John Majors being mentioned for the head coaching job with Pittsburgh's new USFL franchise. John still has a few years left on his contract at Tennessee, but I wouldn't be at all surprised to see him back in the Steel City.

Former Clarion standout Wade Schalles has left Clemson and has accepted the head job at Old Dominion.

Another mat coach looking for work is Bob Zarbattany. He made Easton into a powerhouse before he retired to enter private business. Jim Buss of the Allentown Call informed me last week Zarb wants back into coaching.
